LABOR BACKS FARRAR IN ANTI-DRY BATTLE

Not Gliders, but Airships Wanted

Who Can Fight an Alp?

Another Attempt to Kill Rather Expensive Targets

—By Arthur Brisbane—

Copyright, 1930, King Features Synd., Inc.

LOS ANGELES, FEB. 7—Col. Lindbergh continues his work with air gliders. Traveling without engines they seem to fascinate the great pilot. He has tried flying gliders before daylight, to experiment with early morning winds, and recently flew 15 miles in a plane with no engine. Reporters say he means to try for the glider long distance and endurance record.

That is all interesting and courageous, but has little to do with the important part of flying, still in its infancy. Ships that will not crash, pilots trained to think only of passengers' safety, not so much about proving that they are not "yellow," are needed. The pilot that will "go through in any kind of weather" needs to be replaced by the man who will take passengers only in perfectly safe weather. After that will come planes and flying methods to which no weather will make any difference.

The glider, interesting toy, goes with air currents, teaching, perhaps, a little about flying. But it has as little to do with great airships of the future as the Hawaiian surf board has to do with improved ocean steamships.

Lindbergh commands the attention and respect of capital and industry. What he recommends will be tried. Even the Government might wake up and cease leaving the flying future to chance if Lindbergh urged it. His mind should be on weather defying airships for 1000 passengers, not on a cunning little board that will swim the air with a man sitting on it.

If you say that a man who knows nothing about flying should not presume to advise one who knows all about flying, please remember that the inventor of the sewing machine did not know how to sew.

Another attempted murder among our Latin-American friends. An attempt, fortunately a failure, is made on the life of Mello Vianna, vice-president of Brazil. As in the recent Mexican outrage, the man attacked was making a political address and the would-be murderer was moved by political hatreds. Only harsh severity can meet such an assassination epidemic.

Our gentlemen at the naval conference are said to agree on a program of 15 battleships for 1931, Britain and America to have the same number. Japan would have nine. Fifteen new battleships would cost this country, with its costly building methods, at least nine hundred million dollars, and offer 15 conspicuous targets to enemy aircraft.

The cost of 10 battleships would provide airplanes and submarines in case war should come.

Britain and this country continue the effort to suppress use of submarines. Britain, depending on ships to feed her population, wants no submarines, of course; they would starve Britain in war.

Uncle Sam is the kind-hearted cat that pulls Britain's chestnuts out of the fire, or tries to.

We do NOT depend on food from abroad. We DO need submarines, to protect our coasts, the Panama canal, our harbors and island possessions. What British eloquence is it that persuaded our agents to act against the national welfare? What British influence in our government gives British instructions to American delegates? Fortunately, France and Japan, represented by delegates that do not get their instructions from Britain, will probably block the submarine nonsense.

Texas has an "Anti-Chain-Store Association," to drive out and keep out chain stores owned outside the State. The governor and other high officials are said to endorse the association which seeks to protect thousands of small merchants, driven to the wall by chain store efficiency and economy.

The plan will not work, for efficiency and economy always win in the long run. You might as well have organized stage coach drivers to keep out the locomotives. It is useless for merchants to deceive themselves with false hopes. The chain store can be fought only with greater efficiency and greater economy. If small merchants can organize and accomplish that, they will solve their problem. Otherwise not.

FRANCE, ITALY ARE PERIL TO NAVY CUT

Tardieu to Answer Stimson Statement; Japs Still Wary; Even Americans Dissatisfied

London, Feb. 8 (AP)—Andre Tardieu, French Premier, was reported today in naval conference circles to be considering making a statement in which French needs and aspirations would be expressed.

It would compare with the statements of Secretary Stimson and Premier MacDonald of the past two days.

Besides dealing with other matters, the experts committee today practically finished its work on the cruiser category problem. It will hold a further session Monday and is expected to report to the next meeting of the first conference committee.

Conference circles, having been shaken by the explosion of two mines in the shape of the dramatic American-British pronouncement of policy, looked forward with interest, not unmixed with trepidation, for another jolt Monday or Tuesday from the French government head.

FRANCO-ITALIAN ROW

It was believed the probable impending announcement might deal with the question of Franco-Italian parity which thus far has been one of the biggest obstacles toward a five-power agreement. There was no indication whatsoever that either France or Italy had changed its viewpoint—Italy remaining adamant in its demand for parity and France declining to concede it.

It was made quite clear that Secretary Stimson's and Mr. MacDonald's statements caused no joy in French headquarters where Tardieu was said by some to be plainly vexed at the turn the situation had taken.

Reuters Paris dispatches described French comment as of "a distrustful tone."

U. S. WON'T AGREE

It was open to question, in general opinion, whether the two statements of national aims advanced the procedure toward merging of the naval needs of the five powers into a compact satisfactory agreement or endangered final adjudication of differences with the two Mediterranean powers.

The Japanese officially had nothing to say. Reijiro Wakatsuki, former Japanese premier and delegation head, said informally that he was "neither astonished nor annoyed." He said also that Japan had no intention at present of issuing a statement as she had nothing to add to her views previously expressed.

The first American objection to the British aircraft carrier scheme is that the United Kingdom has great superiority in merchant ves-

U. S. Missionaries in China Kidnaped

Shanghai, Feb. 8 (AP)—Many foreign missionaries have been kidnaped recently by bandits, who with military organizations are terrorizing the populace of several provinces of China.

Roaming undeterred by government forces, thousands are looting the countryside and besieging cities.

Desperadoes in northern region of Kwangtung province also are harassing the populace and abducting missionaries in the hope of obtaining ransom money.

A dispatch from Swatow, in Kwangtung, said that bandits continued to hold three German missionaries westward of the city. Captives for several weeks, their fate is not known. An American missionary in that area, who was kidnaped recently, escaped and has arrived at Swatow.

Another American missionary, a woman, wask idnaped Thursday from Soochow, within 50 miles of Shanghai. Nationalist government officials said that she was released today.

Oakland, Cal., Feb. 8 (INS)—Racing to the Atlantic seaboard in an effort to be the first transoceanic flier of 1930, William Ulbrich, noted young New York pilot, was winging eastward today from Oakland.

His ultimate goal is Ostend, Belgium.

Ulbrich is headed for Lehighton, Pa., where he will take delivery of a "mystery" plane, constructed by Martin Jensen, Dole racer. A navigator, possibly a girl, will be selected and test flights begun immediately, Ulbrich said before his takeoff here.

The flight is to be backed by a New York society woman.

Ulbrich was a member of the "Three Musketeers" endurance team a year ago. He is the fiance of Viola Gentry, who was seriously injured in an attempt to set a sustained flight record.

Suicide in Gun Store May Be Wife Beater

Pretending he was going to buy a rifle, a man believed to be Clarence Trefry of Malden, wanted in connection with a brutal beating on his wife and child, got a gun from a salesman in Iver Johnson's sporting goods store in Adams sq. today and blew the top of his head off.

Papers found in the dead man's pockets bore Trefry's name, police said, and Medical Examiner George B. Magrath asked Malden police to bring somebody to the North Grove st. morgue to identify him.

Brutally clubbed with a flatiron, Trefry's wife, Eileen, 34, and his 4-year-old daughter, Hilda, are at Malden Hospital with fractured skulls and doctors fear for their lives. Their names are on the danger list and both were still unconscious many hours after the attack which occurred last night in their home on Cross st.

The pseudo customer walked into Iver Johnson's today and approached Richard Allen, rifle salesman, asking to see a Springfield 30-30 army rifle, and some soft-nosed bullets. Allen complied.

He then asked to see some steel-jacketed bullets, and when Allen turned his back he placed the muzzle to his right temple and fired. The shot and excitement that followed drew a large crowd.

Friends of the Trefry family could give no information about a quarrel, but neighbors said they saw a man of his description leaving the house shortly after his wife's screams were heard.

Acosta Goes Back to Jail for 7 Days More

Mineola, N. Y., Feb. 8 (INS)—The marital troubles of Bert Acosta, transatlantic flier, will keep him in jail for another week. Acosta was sent to jail last week for failing to provide for his family after being paroled on a similar charge recently. Today he was taken before County Judge Lewis J. Smith, given a severe tongue lashing and returned to his cell for seven more days.

Acosta gave as his excuse the failure of a promised position with the Charles Levine Aircraft Company to materialize.

TAFT CHEERFUL; RESTS EASILY

Washington, Feb. 8—Attendants at the home of William Howard Taft said today he had spent another "very restful night," had slept well and was in good spirits when he awoke.

The 11.30 bulletin issued by the physicians said that Mr. Taft continued to improve and was very comfortable.

His brother, Horace D. Taft, decided today to return to the Taft school at Watertown, Conn., of which he is head master, confident, he said, that his brother was in no immediate danger and his own presence here was no longer necessary.

President Hoover was personally advised there was little likelihood Mr. Taft would become worse during the President's stay in Florida next week. It was said Mr. Hoover would not have agreed to leave on his fishing jaunt if Mr. Taft were considered critically ill.

Hoovers to Start for Florida Tonight

Washington, Feb. 8—Eager to get away for a fishing trip off the Florida coast, President Hoover conferred today with congressional and executive department chiefs preparatory to his week's absence from the capital.

Senator Watson, of Indiana, Republican senate leader, was a breakfast guest and informed the President of the legislative situation at the Capitol where he reported the Senate would be busy all next week, as usual, on the tariff.

Senate leaders have hopes of early disposition of this long pending measure, but they do not believe it can be done next week. So, Senator Watson informed the President, that he need look for no major legislation from the Capitol before his return.

The President is anxious for confirmation of the nomination of Charles Evans Hughes as chief justice, succeeding William Howard Taft. The Senate judiciary committee will consider the nomination Monday, and there is every indication of immediate Senate approval.

Cleaning up odds and ends, the President also is expected by some to send the nomination to the Interstate Commerce Commission of Hugh M. Taft of Knoxville, Tenn., to the Senate before his departure. A vacancy on the commission exists

WILL FIGHT TARR DRIVE ON RUM BUYERS

Carmen's Union to Lead in Action Against the U. S. Prosecutor's Campaign

A fight to the very finish on prohibition was forecast today between enforcement agencies and organized labor as a result of the arrest-the-buyer drive launched by United States District Attorney Frederick H. Tarr.

The labor challenge will probably be voiced Monday night when the Carmen's Union, in executive session, will discuss the indictment of one of its members, James Farrar of Watertown, for the purchase of two pints of liquor.

The union, it is expected, will come to Farrar's defence officially, with the backing of the American Federation of Labor, with which it is affiliated.

The national labor organization is emphatically on record as opposed to prohibition.

OPPOSED BY DAVIS.

While this loomed as the most important development immediately following the first indictment for purchase, the Massachusetts drys split against themselves over the new issue that has raised in their already disorganized ranks. The Anti-Saloon League went on record as opposing buyer-prosecution.

In addition there loomed the threat of internal war in the enforcement agencies.

The state branch of the Anti-Saloon League views Tarr's action as ill-timed and expressed its disapproval through Arthur J. Davis, the local leader.

"I do not feel that the time has come for liquor purchasers to be treated so," said Davis. "It is perhaps too soon to jail [illegible] now."

Tarr's opening [illegible] his announced war on the customers of bootleggers and speakeasies has reverberated with an accompanying sound as loud as the [illegible] itself—the protests of one faction of the drys who warn that such a drastic and relentless crusade, while possibly within the law, will do more than anything else to "harm the cause of prohibition."

This, also, is the reaction of the anti-prohibition group who profess to be jubilant over the indictment and its future complications.

But the greatest threat to enforcement, viewed from all angles, is the embarrassing situations bound to arise within the government if Tarr carries out his avowed intention of prosecuting every purchaser.

AGENTS IN JEOPARDY.

The greatest asset of the federal prohibition force—the undercover agent who buys liquor to obtain evidence—will be in jeopardy.

The law, it is pointed out by the anti-prohibition group, makes no allowance for any leeway to government officials who may buy and drink in order to obtain evidence, and the federal agents so doing will be as liable to prosecution as the ordinary citizen buyer.

Farrar is going to fight his indictment, "if I have to take the case to the United States Supreme Court," he warns, which means that the case, already attracting nation-wide attention, will become a national issue of enforcement.

The dry faction, which is not happy over the indictment, points out that if a drive is conducted on the purchaser, it will be—under present enforcement conditions—at the expense of prosecuting larger and more important cases.

Tarr's hope of enforcement through prosecution of the buyer-at-retail lies in whatever fears may

HE'S A JOLLY FELLOW, TOO, AT GOLFING

Gen. Ames, 95, Oil King's Antagonist for 18 Years, Says Rockefeller Keeps Temper

By JAMES L. KILGALLEN
(Copyright, 1930, by International News Service)

If he "dubs" a shot he takes it philosophically. If he gets a very bad lie he "lifts out" and takes a penalty rather than dig up the turf or scatter the sand. He is the "happy warrior" of the links.

So declared Gen. Adelbert Ames, his golfing companion for years, in an exclusive interview today. Gen. Ames is 95 years of age, five years older than John D., and lives in a low, rambling mansion overlooking the palm-lined Halifax river. He has played more games of golf with Mr. Rockefeller than perhaps any other person. He is the only surviving general of the Civil war and the oldest living graduate of the United States military academy.

JOHN D. A "JOLLY FELLOW"

"I have played golf with Mr. Rockefeller ever since he came to Ormond 18 years ago," said Gen. Ames. "That is, I played with him until a year or so ago when I gave up golf because it was overtaxing my constitution.

"Mr. Rockefeller is a jolly golfing companion. I miss our games. While he is not an athlete he plays his eight holes every day in the year, except Sundays—rain or shine. He naturally has become a good golfer for a man of his years. Not a Bobby Jones, of course, but few men, if any, of his age, can beat him. I should say he averages about six strokes a hole. He usually shoots around 48 for the eight holes."

"Does he ever lose his temper, or throw away his club in disgust after making a poor shot, general?" he was asked.

"Gracious no, he is a very placid golfer," General Ames replied. "One must be phlegmatic and relaxed to play good golf, and he is. He does not indicate his feelings, whether he is going well or poorly. He takes everything philosophically. If he makes a poor shot he ignores it. Sometimes when he makes a bad tee shot he drives again, ignoring the first shot."

CURSE? HORRORS, NO!

"Ever hear him cuss?"

General Ames looked surprised and replied negatively.

"When I first played him 18 years ago I could beat him but it wasn't long before he was beating me," the General related. "One thing about him, he can concentrate. Must have learned that in business.

"When he concentrates he is perfectly immobile. Once I noticed him standing on the fairway, showing no signs of life, standing there absolutely still. Noting my expression, he said 'Excuse me, Ames, I was thinking.'"

People like Rockefeller and stop him on the links to chat, the General said, and this used to slow up their friendly contests. John D. gets a "kick" out of exchanging pleasant repartee with those he meets on the course. He has a large coterie of friends.

"Mr. Rockefeller is dominating in a way on the links—that is in a friendly way like a father with his children," Gen. Ames continued. "He takes charge of his foursome and tells his companions when and how to play. But he is not offensive about it."

Smilingly alibiing the fact that Mr. Rockefeller's game became better than his, Gen. Ames said he never took a lesson while "Mr. Rockefeller is at it all the time."

DIMES FOR GOOD SHOTS.

"When I would make a good shot he would give me a dime or a nickel," Gen. Ames related. "When he made a good shot I tried to give him a dime or a nicket, but he wouldn't take it.

"Once I said to him: 'I don't want to make a beggar of you, Mr. Rockefeller, but I'll bet you a nickel you can't make that shot.' He didn't have the nerve to make the bet."

Mr. Rockefeller never bets, he revealed. He is not a long driver, but he rarely gets in trouble because he keeps on the fairway. Yes, it's a fact he chalks his driver to see whether he's hitting 'em right.

Rockefeller Bets a 'Drink' at Golf and Pays It!

Ormond Beach, Fla., Feb. 8—John D. Rockefeller, Sr., an ardent golfer if there ever was one, never has played the "19th hole." It is a well-known fact he does not touch intoxicating liquor.

On the Ormond Beach links he was playing with a man who is not in sympathy with the Volstead act. This man wanted to bet, which is against Mr. Rockefeller's scruples.

"I'll bet you a drink I can make this shot," he said at one point. Mr. Rockefeller laid his scruples aside and took the bet. His opponent won.

"Come down to my house and I'll get you the drink," said Mr. Rockefeller.

At the house John D. turned to his butler and said: "Michael, get Mr. Blank a drink of [illegible] cold water."

POPE'S ENVOYS SAVE 150,000 FROM DEATH

Pontiff, Deploring Persecutions by the Soviet, Says Powers Refused to Act

Vatican City, Feb. 8 (AP)—Pope Pius in an open letter to Cardinal Pompili today deplored religious persecution in Russia and asked that prayers be said throughout the world for the cessation of such persecutions to Christians.

The pontiff said since the beginning of his reign he had multiplied efforts to stop the terrible persecution and had asked the governments at the Genoa conference that they reach an agreement for combined representation to Russia concerning the persecution, but that the request had been refused.

"Respect for conscience, the liberty of worship and the property of the church would have been safeguarded if the different governments had also respected the laws of God," the pontiff said.

He also declared that the papacy through envoys had saved 150,000 children from horrible deaths until forced by the Soviets to cease its efforts.

The letter, which was intended for world dissemination, said the Pope would go to St. Peter's on February 19—the feast day of St. Joseph—to celebrate a special mass of propitiation and reparation for indignities committed against christians.

It decried not only persecutions but attempts to undermine the religious mass of people by indirect pressure of the government, mentioning mock religious ceremonies by the Soviet and the forcing of people to take an oath of atheism by refusing them labor and provisions.

3 MINE BLAST RESCUE MEN ARE KILLED

Death Toll in Utah Disaster Rises to 23, Including Three Missing

Salt Lake City, Utah, Feb. 8 (AP)—Grim death once more stalked through the Standard Coal Company mine at Standardville, Utah., and added the names of three rescue workers to those of a score killed Thursday by an explosion and poisonous gas.

The three rescue workers were killed when a huge boulder fell on them.

They were John R. Loman, 24, of New Mexico; Clarence E. Smith, 36, Great Falls, Mont., and Walton Henderson, 18, of Standardville. Their bodies were recovered.

They were members of a "fresh-air" crew and were endeavoring to ventilate one of the gas-filled slopes when the huge rock fell on them.

Funeral arrangements for 17 killed in the explosion were being made today. Three others are still missing.

Three Killed by Blast in Pennsylvania Mine

Pottsville, Pa., Feb. 8 (AP)—Three miners are dead today, victims of an explosion, said to have been caused by the ignition of a pocket of gas, in the mines of the Lincoln collieries, near here. The collieries belong to the Philadelphia and Reading Coal & Iron Company.

The dead were: Levi Kreiser of Greenplant, Daniel Lehman of Pine Grove and Charles Frantz of Mowry. Three others were burned, one seriously.

The blast did little damage to the workings.

"First Victim"

FEAR FALL MAY LEAVE PRELATE LIFE CRIPPLE

Mgr. McDonough of Lewiston, Me., Near Death in Mishap During Stroll

Lewiston, Me., Feb. 8 (AP)—If Rt. Rev. Monsignor Michael C. McDonough, V.G., P.A., P.R., recovers from injuries received in a 12-foot fall, he may not again be able to walk without crutches, it was said today at Central Maine General Hospital. His name was on the danger list.

Although the shock of the fall and many fractured bones, complicated by probable internal injuries, was marked, hope was entertained that the rugged constitution of the 69-year-old pastor of St. Patrick's Roman Catholic Church would turn the balance in his favor.

The Rt. Rev. John Gregory Murray, bishop of Portland, with whom as vicar-general he has concurrent jurisdiction in Maine, came here at once.

While taking his daily walk, Monsignor McDonough entered a large building being erected on Park st. to note how the work was progressing as had been his custom since it was started. In the darkness he fell into an elevator pit, where he lay on a pile of bricks for nearly an hour until his groans attracted the attention of a taxi driver.

Police and firemen, summoned by the driver, found him conscious. They lifted him from the pit and took him to the hospital, where multiple fractures were found.

Garrett Comes Back From N. Y. Suddenly had read in the New York papers he was being sought by the federal authorities, and had hurried back to Boston.

It was explained that the grand jury, for which the original subpoena was issued yesterday, had been excused until February 18, so a new summons was served on Garrett by Deputy U. S. Marshal Ralph Sawin.

PHONED TO FRIEND

It was also revealed that Garrett had telephoned Sawin, a friend of his family, and that the two men had met by appointment at the Y. M. C. A. building on Huntington ave.

The original subpoena was there served by Sawin, Garrett explaining:

"I was not trying to run away. I didn't know about the subpoena and when I did learn about it I came right over from New York."

Sawin took him to the U. S. attorney's office in Young's Hotel and introduced the former liquor raider to Stone, who, as it happens, handles most of the federal liquor prosecutions.

"I have not tried to evade service of this subpoena," Garrett said to Stone. "I have been in New York on business and as soon as I learned your office had been looking for me I cam back to Florida."

SAYS, "I'LL BE THERE"

The second subpoena called for his appearance before the grand jury to testify in the case of "The United States against certain unknown persons."

"I'll be there," Garrett promised as he left the building.

It was when an attempt was made to serve the original subpoena yesterday that Garrett's absence was discovered. At that time no information as to his whereabouts could be obtained.

This morning it was stated that federal officials had learned Garrett was in New York and were confident he would return as soon as he found out he was wanted.

At 11 o'clock today Garrett telephoned Sawin, his friend, who had talked with members of the former raider's family yesterday. Over the telephone Garrett said he had read stories in the New York papers to the effect that he was being sought here and had taken a train for Boston, having just arrived.

He agreed to meet Sawin for service of the subpoena at any place specified by the deputy marshal. The Y. M. C. A. building was agreed on and the two men met there half an hour later.

However, the dificulty on this score is not believed insurmountable.

The United States naval experts are unanimously against the plan for cutting the total aircraft carrier tonnage to 100,000 declaring that 135,000 tons are necessary because of the large percentage of the American allotment already consumed in the Lexington and Saratoga, America's two aircraft carriers.

Man and Woman Are Found Slain in Auto

Torrington, Ct., Feb. 8 (AP)—The bodies of Joseph Neller of Litchfield, and Mrs Rose Yanco of this city, both with bullet wounds in their temples, were found today in a parked automobile. Dr. H. B. Hanchett, medical examiner, said it was a murder and suicide.

Evidence indicated that Neller, who had been attentive to the woman, had first slain Mrs. Yanco, widow and mother of a nine-year-old boy, and then killed himself. The woman's refusal to encourage Neller's advances, it is believed, was responsible for the shooting.

as a result of expiration of the term of one commissioner.

The Hoover party is due at Long Key early Monday, and will board the houseboat Saunterer, chartered by the President for the occasion from his friend, Jeremiah Milbank. It is the same boat the Hoovers used last winter when they spent a month in Florida before inauguration March 4.

Two smaller houseboats will be waiting for the secret service, and the tiny fleet will promptly sail out to isolation and the fishing grounds.

Accompanying the President will be his fishing companions of many seasons—Associate Justice Harlan Fiske Stone of the Superior Court; Dr. Vernon B. Kellogg, oldtime S st. neighbor, and Larry Richey of the White House secretariat. Completing the immediate party will be Lieut.-Comdr. Joel T. Boone, the presidential physician, and tagging along as "official observers"—from the shore—will be nine newspaper men and four photographers.

No stops are to be made either coming or going. Mr. Hoover has determined to make this a complete holiday.

Paso de Los Libres, Argentina, Feb. 8 (AP)—A private message received here today says Dr. Juan Bautista Luzardo, national deputy for Rio Grande Do Sul and leader of the party supporting the presidential candidacy of Getulio Bargas, was assassinated in Rio Janeiro.

The message said that great indignation prevailed in the state of Rio Grande Do Sul.

Anti-Saloon League Opposes Atty. Tarr

be aroused in the collective mind of the liquor-consuming public and it is obvious that he expects his action to be a bear on the market.

But if the Farrar case goes to the highest courts in the country it will take months and in the meantime there will be no final punishment of the buyer. And until the Supreme Court has ruled on the legality of the indictment, the anti-prohibitionists point out, it is unlikely Tarr's action will have any counteracting effect upon liquor buying.

WHOLESALE ARRESTS

The anti-prohibition organizations may be expected to get behind the Farrar case with the weight of much public opinion and considerable financial resources and emphasize the issue through long-drawn-out court procedure.

As the case now stands, federal agents may go into any speakeasy and make wholesale arrests of the assembled gathering if liquor is found on the premises or in the possession of anyone present.

Meanwhile, Federal agents will continue to be sent out to buy liquor to obtain evidence, although there is nothing in the law which specifically exempts them from arrest for so doing, declared Rev. Jonathan S. Lewis, Federal prohibition administrator for the New England District.

Administrator Lewis stated that there was a presumption of "some leeway to government officials charged with law enforcement, but admitted that there is nothing to substantiate his belief 'until this matter has been ruled on by the courts."

Conflicting statements were made by the administrator and Tarr. The latter declared that all purchasers against whom evidence was clear would be brought before the Federal Grand Jury for indictment while Administrator Lewis said that there was no intention of carrying on a concerted drive against purchasers of liquor.

The indictment of Farrar has stirred both the prohibitionists and antis as has no other incident in the history of local enforcement.

United States Attorney Tarr is accused of seeking to make political capital out of the case with a view to winning the nomination for the United States Senate.

No similar action is contemplated by the Boston police in their activities against speakeasies. Supt. Crowley stated that "the Boston police will do absolutely nothing toward prosecuting purchasers of liquor," and pointed out that they operate on an altogether different basis from Federal agents, being confined within the State laws.

Farrar, who is 31, married, and has a daughter aged five, lives in moderate circumstances and has never had any police record heretofore.

"They are making a goat out of me because I'm a poor man," he said.

SCORED BY WOMEN

Prominent women declared Tarr's action to be "the last feeble though drastic effort to stem the tide of national sentiment for some modification of the prohibition law."

"Not only is such a step unwarranted but it is so extreme and so fanatical that it will prove a boomerang for the cause of prohibition reform," Mrs. Frank. C. Scanlan, president of the Margaret Brent Civic Guild, declared.

"It is astonishing that such a step should be taken at this time in the face of national sentiment recognizing the uselessness of dry law enforcement," she said. "The only hopeful thing about the whole situation is that the fanatics in control of the Republican party at this time, by their very fury, are developing sane, thoughtful leaders who will settle this issue on an economic basis.

"Men high in political and civic circles are recognizing the growing demand throughout the country for prohibition reform, and it is bound to come when Mr. Tarr carries out his threat to jail all buyers of liquor. That is the last stand of a defeated cause."

Mrs. William Lowell Putnam, sister of President Lowell of Harvard, characterized Tarr's action as utterly ridiculous and wrong.

"The whole situation of prohibition in this country is absolutely wrong," Mrs. Putnam stated. "The time is ripe for a change."

Mrs. Grace Putnam, secretary of the Massachusetts W. C. T. U., declared that her organization is non-partisan and non-sectarian but that it stands firmly for enforcement of the dry law.

"Should the present enforcement measure split the Republican party we would support a dry candidate in any other party," Mrs. Putnam said. 'If neither party has a dry candidate we shall put up our own and the W. C. T. U. will continue to fight for prohibition till the fight is won completely."

"LOGICAL," SAYS ARCHER

The legal aspects of Tarr's action were commented upon by Dean Gleason L. Archer of Suffolk Law school as follows:

"The action of prosecuting the buyer as well as the seller of bootleg liquor is both courageous and logical.

"In a public address last April I stated: 'Can the act of one person be a crime without involving in the same crime the person who knowingly pays him for performing that criminal act? To say that the latter is not so involved would be contrary to all of our conceptions of criminal law.' I pointed out, also, tha thte whole bootleg structure is based upon 'the supposed right of citizens to exercise their personal liberty by purchasing bootleg liquor.' No man has 'personal liberty' to violate any law, state or federal. Until the 18th amendment and the laws for the enforcement thereof are repealed the purchase of bootleg liquor is quite obviously, both in law and in logic, a criminal offence. Mr. Tarr's action is bound to have far reaching effect and should be welcomed, both by those who favor repeal and those who believe that prohibition is here to stay. It should hasten the verdict one way or the other."

'PULL' OF STICKER BALLOTS TO DECIDE CONGRESSIONAL FIGHT

2D DISTRICT ELECTION TUESDAY

Three Republicans In Race; Senator Walsh to Speak for Lone Democrat

Chicopee, Feb. 8—William J. Granfield, Democratic candidate for Congress at the special election next Tuesday, expects great results from the two speeches which will be made for him tonight by United States Senator David I. Walsh.

Senator Walsh, if he keeps his engagements at the City Hall here and Central high school in Springfield, will be the only speaker of national importance to enter the Second District contest on behalf of any candidate.

Granfield's hope lies in the fact that there are three Republican contestants, namely:

Frederick D. Griggs, Springfield, "regular" Republican nominee.

Whitfield Reid, West Springfield, "bone dry" Republican, favorite of the W. C. T. U.

Former Mayor William H. Feiker, Northampton, in the race as a dry Republican who puts the Constitution above all things else and "stands by" President Hoover and Governor Allen.

FIGHT ON STICKERS

To the Boston Evening American correspondent it would appear today that Regular Republican Candidate Griggs might be in serious danger if the names of Reid and Feiker were to appear upon Tuesday's ballot in print—as his own will appear.

They won't.

The two "bone dry" Republicans are "sticker" candidates, which means that they have gone to considerable expense to have their names printed on slips of paper which will have to be gummed onto the ballot by those who wish to vote for them.

As the Second Massachusetts Congress District is overwhelmingly Republican, the puzzle of the situation is how many drys—Republican and Democratic—will go to the trouble of using "stickers."

The uproar of the drys, which the count on Tuesday may show has been overestimated, is due to the fact that former Representative Fred Griggs has announced is readiness to vote for the repeal the Prohibition Amendment and under certain circumstances—the odification of the Volstead Act. What former Mayor Feiker of orthampton particularly resents that Griggs did not make his sition known until it was too te to enter a "bone dry" Reublican against him in the reglar way.

NOT WET HIMSELF

Griggs, the "regular," is not personally wet. In the State Legislature, as a matter of fact, he voted consistently the Anti-Saloon League way. But two years ago, on referendum, this district voted for "repeal," and Griggs feels that a representative ought to represent. Here are his own words on the subject:

"There is one issue in this campaign which is not a party issue although it is a live issue. The district had expressed its wishes on it and I consider that I am morally bound, if not legally bound, to respect the wishes of the voters.

"If representatives all over the country pursue a similar course, I am sure we can arrive at a proper solution of this problem on the basis of the country as a whole. On the other hand, any candidate who tries to make any party, whether Republican or Democrat, a One Issue party, is wrecking his party and the very foundations of our two-party system of government.

G. O. P. BACKS HIM

"Is a representative to place himself above the expressed wishes of his constituents? Is he to say, 'I am right and you are wrong?' or should he, as their servant, which indeed he is, reflect their views in the National House?"

While Griggs makes this appeal to the fair-minded, the Republican organization, or "machine," has been working day and night for him in the three cities and 13 towns of the Springfield-Chicopee-Northampton district. In this city, their master stroke was to secure for Griggs the endorsement of the board of directors of the Franco-American Association, which claims to represent all the French-speaking voters of the city.

But Griggs is no greenhorn in the game of politics. President of the Hampden County Republican Club, he has been secretary of the Massachusetts Republican Club, is a former member of the New England Council and served four years in the State Legislature.

The American Federation of Labor is opposed to him because of his vote to permit the night employment of women in textile mills.

None of the "bone drys" of the district have gone after Griggs-the-regular so savagely as Whitfield Reid, the youthful World War veteran, who has won the favor of the Women's Christian Temperance Union.

According to Reid, the "regular" Republican candidate is the Jacob of the campaign, the lad who so deceived his aged father, the G. O. P. (Isaac), that he hopes to walk away with the inheritance which belonged to Esau.

"It was the hope, the wish, the ntention and the design of the epublican party in this district,"

Lindy Plays the Cook While Ann Plays the Hostess at Their Glider Camp

Not only does "The Eagle" eat, but "The Eagle" also cooks it, then doubtless yells, in true western fashion, "Come an' get it while it's hot!" Here he and his fry-pan are at his camp.

Seize Gangsters in Chicago Crime War

Chicago, Feb. 8 (AP)—Wholesale war on the Chicago bad men had started today.

The first skirmish of the new conflict was financed from the private purse of Police Commissioner William Russell for the city has no money. The commissioner provided funds for the purchase of 25 tickets to Jack Dempsey's boxing show last night, picking his best sleuths to attend.

Boxing matches are magnets that lure the "big shots" of the beer racket and gang world from their usual haunts. Commissioner Russell ordered his detectives to pick up every man they recognized as in any way connected with Chicago gang and gun life.

Several arrests were made, but the prisoners were released after being told by Chief Egan of the detective bureau to get out of town.

Those arrested included Benjamin (Buddy) Jacobson, formerly allied with the Morris Eller political interests, but now himself a candidate for ward committeeman, David (Cock-Eyed Mulligan) Albin, proprietor of the lately padlocked Epicure Club, and his brother, Sam; George Kreiss, manager fo the C. and O. restaurant on North Clark, scene of three gang shootings; and Izzy Lazarus, who has been questioned from time to time concerning gambling rackets.

"Pick up everyone you know as a gangster or gang hanger-on," Commissioner Russell ordered. "Hereafter we'll hold them until their release is forced by habeas corpus proceedings. We'll keep on arresting them. Lawyers and habeas corpus proceedings cost them money, you konw."

Another broom to sweep the city of its hoodlum horde was being fashioned by the Chicago Association of Commerce. The membership of the "courage committee," to consist of six men, was to be announced today, with Col. Robert Isham Randolph, president of the association, at its head.

How the committee would proceed was not clear, but the co-operation of the State's attorney and the police department was expected.

Nearly 50 holdups were on the complaint books of the city's 42 police stations early today, representing store and street robberies for the night. An unidentified man was found shot dead in a room on South Sangamon st. shortly after midnight.

Padlock Texas Guinan's Former Chicago Club

Chicago, Feb. 8 (AP)—The Club Royale, a popular Loop night club, has been ordered padlocked for one year by Federal Judge James Wilkerson for violation of the prohibition law. Twenty-three other places, including cafes, drug stores and a 24-flat building, also were padlocked by Judge Wilkerson.

The raid on the Club Royale was made when Texas Guinan was hostess and the prohibition agents were cheered, under the hostess' direction, as they moved among the diners.

PROBE MILLION SPENT IN GIFTS

Chicago, Feb. 8 (AP)—State's Attorney John A. Swanson's curiosity has been piqued by the reputed bestowal of a million dollars' worth of gifts to trustees of the Chicago Sanitary District under the presidency of T. J. Crowe.

He has begun an investigation to learn more about the presents, which he said ranged from radios to diamonds. They were given, the State's attorney's office declared, by the U. S. E. Company, electrical equipment contractors.

Considerable criticism resulted in this company's installation of an ornamental lighting system, said to have cost $1000 a light, on McCormick blvd., built by the Sanitary District.

Last December, a Federal grand jury scanned the records of the U. S. A. Company and returned indictments against two of it's officers on income tax evasion charges. The officers were George L. Chamberlain, president, and Fred W. Rhoades, secretary.

The government also charged that $1,000,000 of the company's funds disappeared during the years 1927, 1928 and 1929 and that company officials refused to disclose for what purpose the money was used.

New Men's Shoe Store Opened by Burt & Co.

The confidence which Boston retail organizations have in the prosperity of the city is evidenced by the building activities and expansions now going on. Among the most recent developments this week in the downtown district was the opening of a new shoe store for men on Bromfield st., by E. W. Burt & Co. This is the second store in Boston conducted under the management of this concern.

Probe Use of Italian Mosaic for U. S. Job

Washington, Feb. 8—Approximately 12,000 bags of travertine have been ordered from Italy for use in terrazzo, or marble mosaic, corridor floorings of the new Department of Commerce building now under construction here.

This fact was brought out in an investigation prompted by a report to President Hoover and to the supervising architect of the Treasury that foreign material was being used in the new building in violation of the contracts.

The travertine, however, was ordered from Italy because it is the only suitable material available for the purpose, it was explained by York & Sawyer, contracting architects who specified its use to the subcontractor, the National Mosaic Company.

In the building contracts is a clause which stipulates that domestic materials must be used in the building in all cases unless a foreign material of better quality is available.

York & Sawyer explained that the travertine ordered was yellow, in accordance with the color scheme of the corridors, and very hard. Deposits of a similar material are found in Colorado, they said, but no quarries are in operation there to furnish a supply.

These facts were informally substantiated at the Treasury Department. A complete report from an agent of the supervising architects' office will be available today or Monday.

The Treasury Department investigation was started when a Vermont quarrying concern complaining that foreign material was being used, while equally good domestic material was available. Another complaint of the same nature went to President Hoover.

BANKER PLANS TO AID CHICAGO

Chicago, Feb. 8 (AP)—Another day—another plan to put money into Chicago's moneyless pockets.

Herbert C. Heller, New York investment banker, held the handle of the newest hopper of hope. After a lengthy conference with City Controller George Schmid, Heller said he would consider the proposition today relative to purchasing the city's entire block of $27,000,000 in 1930 tax anticipation warrants.

Such a sale has been declared legal by the corporation counsel, the opinion holding that the "City Council will be justified in selling tax anticipation warrants in good faith to the highest and best bidder, even though the bid will not net par."

Heller's plan only widened the breach between the city government and the citizens' relief committee, headed by Silas H. Strawn.

Not only this, but the county government has wagged a meaning finger at the Strawn committee with a warning that unless aid is forthcoming from the rescue group by the first of next week, the county will proceed with its original plan of paying employes and creditors in tax anticipation warrants.

Payment in scrip has been frowned on by the Strawn committee, but this did not deter the city controller's office from issuing more of it yesterday this time, $15,000 to meet a milk bill.

With President Caldwell of the school board at loggerheads with the Strawn group and in New York seeking a loan, the three principal local governments were farther from an agreement with the relief committee than at any time since Strawn formed his plan to pour cash into the empty moneybags.

His plan called for complete agreement of all local governments on one plan of relief and a pledge of strictest economy and co-operation, with a proviso that his committee retain final say on all money outlays.

Agreement has never been reached; the relief committee's cash has not made its appearance and the situation is no less acute.

Banquets and beer will be sacrificed by government to contribute toward the relief of the country's distress.

President Von Hindenburg and his cabinet hereafter will spend their evenings quietly at home, it has been announced. Banquets and the famous Hindenburg "beer evenings" will be foregone, and the amount usually used will be donated to relief agencies for public welfare.

LIFE FOR THEFT, 25 YEARS FOR 2 MURDERS

Girl Drug Addict Flays "Justice" Which Dooms Her Under Unbalanced Scales

New York, Feb. 8—The sentencing of Mrs. Ruth St. Claire, 29, a shoplifter, to serve the rest of her life in prison as a fourth offender under the Baumes law has drawn heavy fire on the law.

Judge Max S. Levine of General Sessions, who was forced to impose the sentence Thursday, declared he had "paid a heavy price for the purpose of serving the State and city of New York." He advocated amending the law.

Mrs. St. Claire, a victim of the dope habit and sick in mind and body, sat in her cell in the woman's detention prison today and penned her story. It follows:

By RUTH ST. CLAIRE

I'm just another victim of narcotics. Morphine—taken at first to kill pain—has doomed me to a hopeless, drab existence behind gray prison walls.

I took two baby dresses from a store to give to a friend for Christmas—and am sentenced to life imprisonment.

Mrs. Gladys Parks took the lives of two innocent babies—and she gets off with 25 years.

I entered the courtroom sick of mind and body, unnerved—never thinking when I pleaded guilty that the Baumes law would be invoked. Fifteen minutes was all it took them to send me up for life.

Oh, I expected to go to prison. I welcomed the thought. I'm a victim of the drug habit. I thought that if I could get away some place where I couldn't get morphine there would be hope of regeneration for me.

But to be sent away for the rest of my life—it isn't right—it isn't just—it leaves nothing to live for.

I haven't been able to sleep since this sentence of a living death was pronounced on me.

"I've got a bad record, they'll tell you. You've probably already been told that I'm a drug user. I don't deny it. I never peddled it though. The only time I was arrested on a drug charge was for having it in my possession. But I blame morphine for my present trouble.

Regardless of what I have done through the use of drugs, I don't ask for freedom. I deserve punishment. My own intelligence tells me that.

I've got a good family, a brother, sister, father and mother. I don't want to drag them into this.

The baby dresses were for a girl who used to be a dope user like myself. She broke herself of the habit and is now happily married and settled down. I admired her and wanted to do something for her.

Oxygen Fire Wrecks 5 French Armories

Paris, Feb. 8 (AP)—Five big armories burned to the ground and hundreds of oxygen tanks roared like big guns at the Vincennes arsenal on the eastern edge of Paris today. Not a powder magazine exploded, although fire was all around them.

The loss was estimated at $3,000,000 but may be much greater, as buildings collapsed on artillery stocks.

"LOUISE" IS PRESENTED ABLY

By MOSES SMITH

CHARPENTIER'S "Louise" attracted the usual capacity audience to the Boston Opera House, where the Chicago Civic Opera Company presented this "musical romance" almost exactly as they had here a few years ago.

"Louise" was first given in Paris 30 years ago, but the music and—for our part—the libretto wear well today. The charm of the score, its avoidance of cheap sentiment, its orchestral undercurrent of impressionism suggestive of Debussy's "Pelleas et Melisande"—these and many other things hold the ear of the listener in the year 1930.

Whether or not Charpentier intended to glorify Paris and its gayety of life, he has done so for thousands who sit before the unfolding of his romance. As played last night, however, the conservative elements were much more persuasively represented than were the forces of youth and rebellion. With Maria Claessens' intelligent portrayal of the mother and Vanni-Marcoux' superb impersonation of the father, the two lovers, Mary Garden and Rene Maison, fought a losing battle for their cause, so far as the sympathy of the audience was concerned, even though the play gave them all the better of it at the final curtain.

With an occasional exception, like her splendid Melisande, Miss Garden's art has undergone a steady decrescendo during the past few years.

Mr. Maison was at times an impassioned lover, singing and portraying convincingly the joys of his type. But for the most part he was a rather stodgy, incredible poet, lacking the spark of youth, deceiving no one in the opera house save Louise. He looked neither the scoundrel nor the artist, but simply a respectable bourgeois "taking a part" in an operatic production.

Contrast with this, Vanni-Marcoux' masterly artistry. Our blood had curdled at the sight of his villainy in "Tosca" earlier in the week. Here was quite different matter, and he rose to even greater heights. In the first act he was the very picture of the honest intelligent workingman, bound up in his home and, especially, his daughter.

Mme. Claessens, too, was well cast as the mother, with the best intentions in the world entirely misunderstanding, and coming gradually to hate her daughter. She was ever the actress before the singer, concerned with setting before our eyes the person Charpentier had fashioned.

Giorgio Polacco conducted with the same enthusiasm for, and understanding of, the composer's purpose as he invariably displays when he takes the baton. The orchestral performance was vivid the waltz strains standing out in notable and haunting relief.

WOMEN URGED TO DO BEST FOR YOUTH

WITH the youth of the country again seeking the social and moral assistance of their elders, clubwomen must turn their attention to old age pensions and the future of men and women in the economic world.

This they must do if they are to serve their communities and provide a constructive program.

That the future of men and women in industry is now ripe for earnest and comprehensive consideration and study, Mrs. Eva Whiting White, president of the Women's Educational and Industrial Union, warned her audience, in a brilliant talk on economic and social problems of the country. She was addressing the all-day session of the Community Service Conference of the State Federation of Women's Clubs, presided over by Mrs. Fred C. Cross, chairman, at the Hotel Statler.

For the young people—

"Thank heavens, we are through with that period when the youth of 17, 19 and even 20 took the bit in his mouth. They want you and me today," Mrs. White said.

But the serious problem centers about industry and the part women play in it. It must be considered, Mrs. White pointed out, with the young woman entering the field, cutting wages, getting married and then returning to it.

"We are back where we were 20 years ago," she said. "The social trends as they lead into every phase of family life must be taken up, together with the future of men and women in industry."

She begged the women not to start any more social agencies, however new and brillant the ideas, but to put the ideas into an agency already in existence.

SERVICE NEEDED

"Boston has social agencies enough. We are overloaded with them. Today is a period of coordination and co-operation. It would be well for those who have ability to serve these agencies rather than hand out to them lip-service. There is ample opportunity for such service, for many of these agencies are not properly named.

"One thing will save us today and that is the personal participation of the best citizens of our city in the activities and lives of the young people. As for leisure, the same old story still governs its use. The question of thrift, of course, is closely related to those two important problems of old age pensions and what's to be what in the economic world."

Here Mrs. White told of the amazing number of women who had dabbled in the stock markets and lost their possessions in the crash.

"It is amazing what women will do with money after they have it. This is indeed an important program for women's clubs to bring before their group," Mrs. White pointed out.

As for the economic situation, she believed it to be "pretty good," but "not as stable as we would wish." She urged the women to get to the bottom of things; find out how real the story of great unemployment was; whether it was real or spasmodic.

Mrs. White said she would rather a "dump heap," with able men and women on it to participate in the activities of the young than the best-regulated and most perfectly planned playground inefficiently handled by people of no vision and understanding.

The need today is for personal participation by the best people in the work with youth. The influence which is brought to bear sometimes changes the lives of youngsters as nothing else. Here Mrs. White told personal incidents proving her point. Without naming anyone, she told of the "making" of a group of girls who otherwise would have pursued easier and less virtuous courses had not a social-minded woman taken an interest and led the group to which these women belonged.

Mrs. White told of a meeting which is to take place at the Women's Republican Club, February 17, under the auspices of the Parents' League. Dr. Lillian Gilbreth, mother of a family of 11, is to tell how a career and home life is combined.

CLUBWOMEN AND THE MOVIES

Reports of clubwomen on the work of their committees and chairmen devoted to the betterment of motion pictures were astounding. The women definitely pointed out that their job was not one of censorship but of selection and co-operation with exhibitors. More than 230 motion picture advisors throughout the state are clubwomen.

The women were urged to tell theater managers of good pictures they see and the reason. They were urged to give constructive criticism.

That the department for the betterment of motion pictures is a growing one was evidenced by the lengthy discussion given to it and the interest of the clubwomen in the subject.

The influence of the movies on children, of course, was the underlying reason.

Spring Fabrics Have Soft, Feminine Effects

SPRING is welcomed chiefly for the changes it brings—changes in temperature, scenery, and fashions. Yet a young season cannot afford to discard everything the old season has favored. And so, among other excellent fashions, the "Sunday night frock" is checked as good enough to remain for a while longer.

Sunday night engagements in spring call for costumes just as flattering as Sunday suppers in fall and winter did. Vanity knows no ebb season!

The important fabrics, as you may have guessed, are those that emphasize soft, feminine effects. Chiffon, crepe Elizabeth and ninon, printed and plain, are among them. If you like lace, wear it—and the same is said for net!

IF you have arms "they love to look at" you may wear the tiniest of cap sleeves. If your elbows are worth particular notice, wear the sleeve that stops at just that point or a bit above. And if you feel better when your arms are covered, choose the three-quarter or the full, long sleeve. There is that much leeway this season!

The right hemline is long and preferably even all around. Waistlines are at the natural line and fitted. Yokes and neck details of lace should be looked for. And little jackets that are hip-length or bolero-like often double the worth of Sunday night frocks!

BLACK is always smart, and good fashion, and in sheer chiffon it takes on lightness and grace, with an accent of white it acquires chic and becomingness. The frock pictured is of black chiffon, having long princess lines, with side shirring marking the waistline, and circular sections giving graceful fullness to the lower portion of skirt.

The circular ruffles on lower sleeve section add their quota of grace. The becoming V neck is outlined by a shaped band and bow of white chiffon, closely embroidered in small white beads.

This frock has many uses, and one can be quite sure of its good lines, and general becomingness. The length is particularly effective for a semiformal afternoon frock, and the model's black satin slipper, its one strap fastened by tiny rhinestone buckle, and beige hose in light tone, give correct accent to the costume.

MEDBURY SAYS

By JOHN P. MEDBURY

WHILE many politicians are continually working to keep the press unmuzzled, thousands of married men are trying to revive free speech in the home.

One guy has kept his mouth shut so long that the moths are eating his vocal cords.

He had lock-jaw last year and didn't find it out for three months.

The poor fellow even has insomnia which robs him of the chance of talking in his sleep.

He's a firm believer in re-incarnation and when he dies he wants to return to earth again as a phonograph.

But it won't do him any good. His wife will probably come back as the needle.

Since he's been married he's only had about ten words, and five of them were echoes.

He lost his voice at the altar.

The minister took the words out of his mouth.

And it'll take a judge to put them back again.

A man likes to be able to open something around the house besides the bills.

One fellow says he longs for the good old days when his wife wouldn't speak to him for weeks at a time. That used to be considered cruelty, but nowadays it's a luxury.

RUM REBELLION ROCKS BLACK GOLD LAND

Oklahoma City, Feb. 9 (AP)—A land where black gold and bootleg liquor have flowed together, and law enforcement methods of the old West have gone hand in hand with modern racketeering, is the colorful background of the giant liquor conspiracy trial being heard in federal court here.

Among 107 persons involved are a negro laundress and a negro millionaire, several policemen and an assistant state attorney-general—a heterogeneity accurately reflecting the cosmopolitan oil fields of Pottawatomie county, seat of this latest "rum rebellion" of the West.

Since first discovery of the subterranean treasure of the Pottawatomie oil fields the county has been in the throes of severe growing pains. The symptoms have been a queer mixture of overnight wealth, strenuous politics, tent cities and the flagrant vice which marks all boom communities.

The very courtroom atmosphere differs from the stern and formal air pervading the usual United States courtroom. Judge Edgar S. Vaught, presiding, is a past international president of Lions Clubs, and genial.

PROSECUTOR FORCED OUT

Revelations during the trial have forced the resignation of Oscar Gordon, assistant attorney-general, charged with accepting a bribe for silence after uncovering liquor operations, and having involved the present sheriff of Pottawatomie County and chief of police of Shawnee, the county's largest city.

On the Government side, as an investigator, is W. W. (Snake) Thomason, one-time associate of W. E. (Pussyfoot) Johnson, who leaped to worldwide fame as a militant prohibitionist from a foothold of activities in old Indian Territory, now part of Oklahoma.

On the defense side is Randall Pitman, county attorney, who prosecuted Thomason last summer in the preliminary trial of a murder charge growing out of the killing, by one of Thomason's deputies, of two farmers in a raid near Tecumseh. Pitman is accused, with Frank Fox, former sheriff, of organizing the liquor "line" that operated allegedly with their protection and to their profit, and that brooked no competition.

Chief of the prosecution is Roy St. Lewis, energetic young district attorney, a cousin of James J. Davis, secretary of labor.

Arrayed with the defense is S. Prince Freeling, former attorney general of Oklahoma.

CHANGE FOR GRAFT

It was late in 1926 that the line of oil derricks crossed from Seminole County to the eastern side of Pottawatomie County. With it moved the caravan of small businesses, both legitimate and parasitic, seeking to reap a golden harvest from the generous wages paid the hardy oil workers.

Earlsboro, a village in the midst of the new oil development overnight, became a city of tents and hastily-erected boarded shacks.

Homer Knappenberger, who had served as mayor for several years, testified that Marion Fuller, his chief of police, suggested an opportunity to share in the new affluence by exacting protection money from the influx of bootleggers and dive-keepers.

Knappenberger, who has pleaded guilty and is awaiting sentence, said he and Fuller organized a city "line."

Soon, it is alleged, the city line "merged" with a monopoly established in other communities by county authorities, and whiskey and beer concessions were sold on a basis of weekly payments of protection money. Prosperous men, attracted by the lure of huge profits and immunity from the law, financed would-be bootleggers and took a double "cut" from bootleggers and law enforcement officers.

Five violent deaths and innumerable shooting affrays have been attributed to jealousies aroused by prosperity of the "line." A principal witness of the prosecution died under what was described as suspicious circumstances the night before the trial opened.

WHALING SHIPS COMB ICE SEA FOR WILKINS

Deception Island, Antarctica, Feb. 8, via Deception Island Base Station and KUP, San Francisco Examiner Wireless Station—All whalers in the vast sea of ice that surrounds the South Polar region are turning their attention to Captain Sir Hubert Wilkins, in an effort to locate that intrepid explorer.

With the passing of another day and word of Captain Wilkins still lacking, every vessel equipped with radio and thus knowing of the supposed plight of the head of the Wilkins-Hearst expedition has dropped every other pursuit and turned their entire attention to locating the missing party.

That Captain Wilkins foresaw the possibility of trouble in attempting the airplane flight across the under cap of the world is shown by his dispatch before setting forth on the present trip. He set out for some point West of Peter Island, and hoped to make two or three flights from the edge of the ice pack in that vicinity, if he could find suitable ice for skiis. He planned to fly the Ross sea, he said.

In his last dispatch he sent before he left Captain Wilkins said:

"Rescue in case of accident would now be difficult, but since delay has been unavoidable, it is worth making the effort."

He continued that "it is unlikely that we can send further news for a few days, due to change being made in radio equipment," adding that "our trip is likely to take at least three weeks."

He added that bad weather was likely and mentioned that the chances of meeting fine weather for flying in the higher altitudes at this season was practically at an end. He said, however, that he had high hopes that his planes and equipment would be able to make his expedition a successful one.

The area that he planned to explore has not been visited by a white man since 1874.

Letters From Readers

Dean Archer's Views On Legal Training

Editor Boston American:

My attention has been called to a misleading article that appeared in the evening edition of the Boston Evening American for Feb. 5, entitled, "College Grad Lawyers Assailed by Archer," a story of the hearing before the committee on joint judiciary of that date.

The article states that I appeared in support of a measure aimed to reduce the present low bar examination requirement of two years of evening high school.

As a matter of fact, the bill that I presented (House 376), provided for the raising of the requirement to a complete high school equivalent, to conform to the actual standard in Massachusetts. All law schools in this Commonwealth now require of law students a high school education or its equivalent.

Suffolk Law School has had this requirement for many years. The opposition to the bill was not that I was lowering the standard, as stated by your reporter, but that I was raising it too high.

Current propaganda delights in picturing me as striving for low standards of general education and as attacking college graduates. The very reason I filed the bill was to refute once for all that very propaganda.

For years I have advocated the highest standard that the boy thrown upon his own resources could be expected to meet—namely the high school requirement. Because there are no evening colleges I have consistently and persistently opposed the college standard that has been set up in many states.

The local representatives of that movement have made much of the alleged iniquity of the two-year high school standard in Massachusetts. They have declared that all they desire is a high school equivalent, but they never filed a bill that did not have a dangerous joker in it. House bill 376 gave them an opportunity to demonstrate their good faith. As I expected, they did not appear to support it. There was apparently no public demand for the change and the committee on judiciary referred the bill to the next annual session.

Now, as for attacking the "college grad lawyer," I did nothing of the kind. I did comment on the fact that between 1780 and 1836 college graduates had an absolute monopoly of the legal profession in Massachusetts and that this was accomplished by the bar associations.

I called attention to the fact that there is a strong movement all over the country, sponsored by bar associations, to restore that monopoly, on the plea that it will safeguard the public against dishonest and incompetent lawyers. I asserted that college education was no guarantee of morals and pointed to the disbarred attorney-general and district attorneys, all of whom were college graduates, as evidence in point.

But I did not attack college graduates. I thoroughly believe in college training and have a son in Harvard College. I simply do not believe in college monopoly of legal education because many of our ablest lawyers and jurists are self-educated. We need the best brains and talent in the legal profession the same as in journalism and business, where self-educated men are bright and shining lights.

GLEASON L. ARCHER, Dean.

Service Ailments Often Not Listed

Editor Boston American:

Under present legislation it is required in the Veterans Bureau, before compensation can be awarded, that a veteran must show by that the disability of which he complains was actually incurred in the service.

This is called direct service connection. Some disabilities have been presumed to have had their inception in the service if they are present to a disabling degree of 10 per cent within periods that vary from one year to five all depending upon the type of disability.

Direct service connection is, of course, the hardest to obtain because it is necessary that the government can produce records of the occurrence at the time the war was going on.

Now this is all right for this side of the water, but for overseas men whose records were not kept, and if kept were many times lost, it is very, very hard. The men, too often, refused hospital treatment for their conditions, sticking it out in the face of very grave illnesses which, of course, are not recorded.

The Government never recorded the poisoned water nor the gassed areas nor have they taken the opportunity to allow for such conditions. Of course, in some instances these things are made up in part by comrades' affidavits, but comrades have not the mind, talent and training to draw up affidavits in such form that they will satisfy the bureau in every case.

And in addition, in adjudicating such evidence, the human equation enters very much into it. It all depends many times on how the board that rates the case feels about it.

The Veterans of Foreign Wars is composed solely of overseas veterans and is the only organization in the United States whose ranks exclude those who have not seen overseas service. Other organizations have been hampered in advancing the interests of overseas men inasmuch as they would be overlooking part of their own membership in doing so.

The Veterans of Foreign Wars feel that Congress is willing and ready to grant service connection for disabilities if proper organized effort is undertaken and the department commander feels that now is the right time to go after it.

Seeks More Facts On Rail Consolidation

Editor Boston American:

New England's leading railroad executives have turned down the Interstate Commerce Commission's recently announced plan of railroad consolidations.

They declare that there would be no advantage, but undoubtedly great disadvantage in absentee management.

Why be so indefinite about a situation that affects indirectly but vitally every citizen and inhabitant of the New England States? What does "absentee management" mean?

"The rest of the nation has an important stake in New England's welfare. We ask no special favors, nor preferred treatment, but simply the right to work out our own destiny with due regard to all the advantages that are ours."

With this inconsistent statement they dismiss plans that have been carefully worked out after years of intensive analysis and research made by the Interstate Commerce Commission, authorities in respect to national carrier problems.

What would the disadvantages of consolidation be? What would the advantages be? Let us know the facts.

DAVISON SAYS PLANES ARE TOO SLOW

Washington, Feb. 8—The chief trouble with the airplane is that it's not fast enough, in the opinion of F. Trubee Davison, Assistant Secretary of War for Aeronautics.

Until greater speed is developed aviation will not advance as rapidly as it should, Davison declared in a radio speech in connection with the American Legion aircraft show at New York.

Referring to the need of higher speed, the secretary said:

"We have not advanced rapidly in that particular field in this country in the past two or three years. We have had our minds too much on production of planes and motors that we knew all about, and have not plotted our course with an eye to the future.

"Most large transport planes in this country cruise at only 100 to 120 miles an hour. That is not fast enough to justify the increased cost required to operate an airplane over and above other existing means of transportation.

The Little Shows Itself to Be a Whole Lot When Simple Simon Goes Flying High

MARION DODGE

MISS DODGE proves her merit in "Simple Simon," with Ed Wynn at the Colonial. She reveals why the great Florenz Ziegfeld selected her among the glorified girls. She is charming.

HELEN LYNDE AND JOHN McCAULEY

WHATEVER IT WAS that Miss Lynde said to Mr. McCauley they're happy. Perhaps it was about romance. They're among the many stars in "The Little Show" coming to the Wilbur, Monday.

PEGGY MOSELEY

THEY'RE ALWAYS winners when George White picks them. Miss Moseley is one of his choices, so she scores a big hit in "Flying High" now at the Shubert. She has beauty and talent.

CLIVE STILL HOLDS THE RIBBONS

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

ABOUT this season of the year something usually turns up that reminds us it is time to take inventory of the wares and talents dispensed by Mr. E. E. Clive at his snug playhouse on Stuart st. This gentle hint has become both an annual hope and a great expectation. This time it is Mr. Clive's good friend and volatile spokesman, Signor J. A. Di Pesa, who provides the inspiration. Accepted everywhere as a prophet of unerring wisdom, you may always give heed to the Di Pesa calculations.

AND so, when you were solemnly told that "The Middle Watch" would surely hold the Copley to unstained prosperity for 10 weeks, and the show closes on its eighth, faith in your favorite forecaster just naturally fell into a sharp decline. In another six days, we'll know now. "The Middle Watch" will round out its terminating eighth, and then give way to "The Ghost Train," one of Mr. Clive's most persistent perennials. Mr. Di Pesa's lightning computation, it appears, missed perfect solution by two short weeks.

Nicholas Young

IN chiding Mr. Di Pesa upon his unexpected and, to us, totally inexplicable lapse in reckoning, we had not counted upon the ability (or should we say agility?) of this seasoned seer in the arts to square accounts in full when driven into close quarters. "What are two small weeks?" he queried with abundant Latin fervor. "Only two, miserable, puny weeks! Don't you know that 'The Middle Watch' with its run of eight weeks set up a new local record for the season? Again, I pray, what are two weeks in a press agent's guess?"

WELL, there seemed to be something indisputable in a retort, something conclusive. Why quibble over two weeks when the main achievement as it is figured in the records wins the city's blue ribbon, gold medal or whatever is awarded for outstaying the field. Interest in Mr. Clive's operations, it may be said, are running fairly high, for since the opening of the seasonal campaign last August he has produced but four plays—all of them blessed with rich box office harvest.

IN a season generally accepted as one suffering from pernicious anaemia, it becomes necessary, almost a duty, to acclaim the busy Mr. Clive as Boston's best showman or most practiced magician. Perhaps he is both. In any event, there is sound reason for local pride in the Clive accomplishments. He represents Boson's only depot of original production, patiently and faithfullyy he strives to give an ever widening clientele something new as well as something tempting.

Sweet Phantom

MARY PHILBIN

MISS PHILBIN is in "The Phantom of the Opera" at Fenway and Scollay Sq. Olympia.

Exquisiteness

KATHERINE HASTINGS

MISS HASTINGS pushes the fun along in "Little Accident," joyous farce at the Plymouth.

TALKIES FOR IRISH LASS

SUSAN CONROY, Irish colleen in "Little Accident" at the Plymouth, will soon be all ready for the talkies. In her two seasons on the stage she has already been a Ziegfeld "Follies" glorified girl, a song and dance prima donna in "Rain or Shine," and a dramatic comedienne. She says she plans to return to Hollywood when "Little Accident" ends its present tour. After a long Broadway engagement "Little Accident" jumped to Los Angeles, and it was while basking in the well known sunkist atmosphere that this ambitious young lady from Limerick laid her plans for a Hollywood adventure.

Susan Conroy

Her debut in the "Follies" came after she had attended a convent school near New York and a dancing academy afterward.

Schubert and Strauss In Tuesday Program

Music of Franz Schubert and Richard Strauss will comprise the program of the third concert of the Tuesday afternoon series by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, to be given next Tuesday in Symphony Hall at 3 o'clock. Dr. Serge Koussevitzky will then conduct Schubert's Overture and First Ballet from his "Rosamunde," and also the "Unfinished" Symphony in B minor. Two tone poems of Strauss will be played, "Death and Transfiguration" and "Till Eulenspiegel's Merry Pranks."

Paul Bregor

Paul Bregor, Boston pianist, will give a recital in Jordan Hall on Sunday afternoon, February 23. His program will include works by Bach, Brahms, Beethoven, Schumann, Debussy, Ibert and Paganini Liszt.

GETS SALARY BOOST ALL FOR SONG

THE person who has profited most by a song that has set a fashion in curent revues and musicals—which, is, to be explicit, "Moanin' Low" from "The Little Show," at the Wilbur Monday, is not the author but Libby Holman, who sings it. After her success with the opening of "The Little Show" she was besieged with offers. Her contract with the management expired June 1, and her salary was doubled.

She was in great demand over the radio, and night clubs made her offers of $400, $500, $600 a week to sing after the show. Within a few short months she was averaging, what with the royalties she received from her phonograph records and all, well over $1000 a week.

These she still, of course, gets, whether she is in New York or on the road. And when it came time for "The Little Show" to leave Broadway after a prosperous run of almost a year and the company were asked whether they would go, Holman said she would if her salary was raised.

Because she is one of the biggest selling points of the show, it was. And this time to $1250 a week! Which isn't bad at all for a college girl of 24, who a year ago was a nonentity so far as Broadway was concerned. All because of a song that has a peculiar swing and sadness to it, that has been widely imitated, and that has been one of the biggest sellers for the last nine months. Why this is so Gilbert Seldes may explain long after the audiences at the Wilbur have enjoyed it.

OPERA HEARD IN FILM

THE FENWAY and Scollay Sq. Olympia are presenting what is called the first grand opera in pictures. As a part of the dialogue of "The Phantom of the Opera," a great part of "Faust," as supposedly presented on the stage of the Paris Opera House, is included in the sequences of the mystery drama. Made in full color effects and with famous singers in the principal opera roles, the "Faust" section is most elaborate.

Lon Chaney is the star of the picture, with Mary Philbin and Norman Kerry in the sweetheart roles.

The picture was made from the famous mystery story by Gaston Laroux. Rupert Julian directed it. The sound and dialogue version was directed by Ernst Laemmle.

The New Play

WILBUR—"The Little Show," a revue, featuring Clifton Webb, Fred Allen and Libby Holman. Lyrics mostly by Howard Deitz; music mostly by Arthur Scwartz. Included in the supporting cast are Helen Lynd, Joan Carter-Naddell, Betina Hall, Portland Hoffa, Jack Macauley and Harold Moffitt. Dances by Danny Dare; settings by Jo Mielziner; costumes by Ruth Brenner. Staged by Dwight Deere Wiman; produced by Brady and Wiman, in association with Tom Weatherly.

BROWN OCTOBER ALE TO FLOW, BUT ONLY IN DE KOVEN SONG

PURSUANT to the policy adopted by the Boston Victor Herbert Festival committee to extend its scope to embrace the works of Herbert's famous contemporaries, Smith and De Koven's "Robin Hood," with exquisite score and well-written story, will be presented at the Majestic a week hence as the fifth feature of the Festival.

WHEN the famous Bostonians first produced this masterpiece, on June 9, 1890, it became the musical vogue of the world. Every vocalist sang, every band played, and every street organ tortured "Oh, Promise Me," "Brown October Ale," "The Armorers Song" and other popular airs. The operetta is a fascinating composition prodigal with melodic and euphonic concord, as well as exquisite rhythm. Vigorous, sympathetic and lingering, it has songs that will live, and a story that pulsates with romance and adventure. Reginald de Koven has been referred to as one of the three great pathfinders of genuine American light opera; the other two are Herbert and Sousa. De Koven was the pioneer by a few years of this triumvirate of truly great musicians who had the faculty of combining historic and artistic significance in the themes they created.

William Danforth

Boston was one of the first cities in the United States to welcome and support the initial efforts of these three masters. De Koven's first successful operetta, "The Begum," was produced here by the McCaull Opera Company in 1887. Victor Herbert's first work received an early hearing here and John Philip Sousa's affiliations with Boston are numerous and recent.

Like good wine, this delightfully fantastic romance of Sherwood Forest improves with age. Since its initial presentation by the famous Bostonians over a quarter of a century ago, it has been sung all over the civilized world and its melodies played upon every instrument from the Scotch bagpipe to the Italian hand-organ.

Prominent in the cast are such favorites as Lorna Doone Jackson, Sudmouth Fraser, William Danforth, Greek Evans, William White, Charles E. Gallagher, John Cherry, Olga Steck, Sara Shepperd and Dorothy Seeger. The ensemble embraces 75 voices and the Albertina Rasch Ballet executes a delightful divertissement entitled "The Dance of the Nymphs and Satyrs."

His Hip Flask Is Barrel of Fun

BARRY LUPINO

THIS ACTOR AS BEING TRULY TWO-IN-ONE

A PEEK at Ed Wynn in private life is gratifying and stimulating, for the star of Florenz Ziegfeld's "Simple Simon," at the Colonial, is one individual in public and an entirely different one in private. On the stage he is aggressive, ubiquitous, staring, bold. Off the stage he is quiet, a bit timid, self-effacing and human. How he bridges over from one personality to another is a mystery, and yet no one who knows Wynn in either phase would sacrifice one iota of his contrasting moods.

In writing, rehearsing and playing in "Simple Simon," Ed Wynn proved himself one of the most energetic men of the theater. Nothing, as the plot of "Simple Simon" discloses, is too outrageous for his audiences.

The comedian gets up in the morning at 6 o'clock, full of new ideas. He rushes to the theater. He corrals actors. He telephones Mr. Ziegfeld. He moves quickly, one incident following another. Apparently there is hodge-podge and confusion, and just at that moment there emerges the fulfillment of a new idea, perfectly worked out, clear, refreshing something that audiences will like.

Ed Wynn is two persons in one. But somehow or other, during performances of "Simple Simon' aspects of one personality trickle through to the other and the audience, delighted, relishes the experience.

Even Mr. Arliss Must Make Use of the Jargon

Even if the dialects of the wild Tibetan tribes heard in the Vitaphone version of "The Green Goddess," now at the Metropolitan, are not correct, nobody is going to know the difference.

Lal Chand Mehra, native of India admits that all he could teach the actors in the picture is a dialect nearly like that supposedly used in Northern India among the lost tribes of the high Himalayas. Since no one who will in all probability see the picture will know the difference that was considered close enough.

Plays Remaining

"Flying High" at the Shubert. (Second week.) Musical comedy goes in for aviation and makes a gay time of it. The last week.

"Babes In Toyland" at the Majestic. (Second week.) Revival of Victor Herbert's best sample of what is good for the playgoer, young and old. The last week.

Ed Wynn in "Simple Simon" at the Colonial. (Third week.) Mr. Wynn makes fair sport of fairy tales with fifty lovely ladies providing a highly decorative Ziegfeldian background. The last week.

"Little Accident" at the Plymouth. (Fourth week.) The sentimental side of accidental parenthood turned into a rousing comedy with a pointed moral.

"The Middle Watch" at the Copley. (Eighth week.) Deep sea farce in which fair visitors almost wreck the Royal Navy. The last week.

Demureness

COREL ELLIS

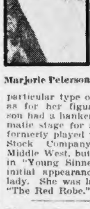
DRAMA'S LURE WINS GIRL

MARJORIE PETERSON, who will be seen in the leading role of "Young Sinners," which the Messrs. Shubert will present at the Lyric (formerly the B. F. Keith) commencing February 20, is another girl who has abandoned the musical comedy stage to enter the dramatic field. She will have the role of Constance Sinclair in the new laughing success, having been selected for her particular type of beauty as well as for her figure. Miss Peterson had a hankering for the dramatic stage for some time. She formerly played with the Wright Stock Company through the Middle West, but her appearance in "Young Sinners" will be her initial appearance as a leading lady. She was last seen here in "The Red Robe."



Marjorie Peterson

Choral Society to Join With Friday Symphony

Debussy's "Blessed Damsel" and "The Martyrdom of St. Sebastian" will comprise the next regular program by the Boston Symphony Orchestra to be given next Friday afternoon and Saturday evening in Symphony Hall. In the first work, the Radcliffe Choral Society, trained by G. Wallace Woodworth, will join with the orchestra, and in the "Saint Sebastian" music, the Cecilia Society, of which Arthur Fiedler is now conductor, will sing. Mme. Ritter-Ciampi, the French soprano, will appear as soloist in each score.

Schelling Concert

The third Schelling concert of the series takes place in Jordan Hall next Saturday morning at 11 o'clock. The program will feature the brass choir,

BLONDES TO WIN IS THE BIG BET

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

MUCH like Finigan in the rhymed patter, Mae Murray was in, then out, and now she is on again—on screen. The fact is interesting in itself; for the blonde siren has a host of admirers. But there is a further importance in her return to the studios. It is more than possible her advent will hearten some of the old-time stars who, listed as "wash-outs" when the talkies came, may be expected some day soon, to try, try again.

SOME of them are doing just what Miss Murray did. Truth is, she beat them all to it: her friends say that something like "second sight" made her know what science was to do to the movies, and to the movie colony. She jumped into vaudeville. That was about 16 months ago. Years ago, as a mere slip of a girl, she had been on stage, as all the fans well know. She was a sort of Cinderella; from Virginia she went to Broadway. Prince Charming saw her beauty, and her slipper took on a high heel when she stepped to a reputation as the "Nell Brinkley Girl" in the Ziegfeld Follies. Climbing the ladder of fame was easy after that. Having an idea sound was going to effect revolutionary things in motion pictures, Miss Murray decided to put herself again to the footlight test. On stage, swinging about the circuits, she danced and sang, and thus kept herself in training for her come-back.

Mae Murray

NOW she is back. In her first talking picture she may be seen this week at the Modern, Beacon and Egyptian. You will guess the title of the production—"Peacock Alley." That is synonymous with Mae Murray. But it is the old silent piece in name only. It has been so thoroughly laundered, starched and ironed, that about all one can recognize is the star herself. In it Miss Murray essays about everything, acting, dancing, singing, wearing the latest in modish costuming, and so on. Our guess is that there will be a host of folks with memories who will trek to see this old favorite of theirs renew her shadowland appeal.

WE may confidently expect to see other screen veterans, unglimpsed in recent months, reappear in shadowland. You know their names; a good many you have heard in vaudeville on Boston stages within the past half year. They too are preparing, getting the stage training, perfecting themselves for the talkiedom which, from their standpoint, cruelly cast them out into the cold. It is our conviction that the path is being strewn with roses even now for some of them.

CONCLUDING, we may say that we have a confidential little desire of our own. Our personal wish is this: that fortune speed the day when Leatrice Joy shall be back! So mote it be!

"GLORIFIED" ETHEL SHUTTA DUE FOR "WHOOPEE" LEAD

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor, Universal Service
(Copyright, 1930, by Universal Service, Inc.)

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 8—Ethel Shutta, pretty blonde wife of George Olsen and former "Ziegfollies" beauty, has just signed to play in "Whoopee" opposite Eddie Cantor. This contract is no surprise and if you read this column you will remember that I mentioned Miss Shutta had journeyed to the studio to make a film version of a Ziegfeld hit.

Louella O. Parsons

Eddie Cantor, who is a great friend of both George and his wife, having acted as best man when they were married and later as godfather to their son, was extremely eager to have Miss Shutta as his leading lady. In fact, I hear tell he appealed to Samuel Goldwyn but Sam being a good showman said, "We'll see how the tests develop." The tests must have turned out according to Hoyle, for a contract was forthcoming almost immediately.

George Olsen, who has succeeded in making his orchestra as popular in Hollywood as it was when he played on Broadway, is making plans to open an exclusive night club. He believes there are enough New Yorkers here to make such a club profitable.

THE whole world, including Hollywood, has been waiting to hear Pathe's plans for Mrs. John Gilbert. You see, there were rumors that she might forget the talkies and return to the stage. Perhaps I really should call her Ina Claire, since the name, Ina Claire, was very well known before she promised to love, honor and obey the popular Jack. "Lazy Lady" is the intriguing title and the story is by Basil Woon and Clare Kummer.

WELL, here is an interesting bit of news. Dorothy Mackaill, who played opposite Milton Sills in "The Barker" and "His Captive Woman," is again to occupy the center of the stage with Mr. Sills in "A Very Practical Joke" at the Fox studios. Dot is under contract to First National, but when a company wants a girl, it is easy to borrow her. Kenneth McKenna and William Harrigan are also in the cast, so you see this is to be a very special talkie. Dot, by the way, is playing tennis every day and getting a fine suntan. Tennis, at the moment, seems the most popular outdoor sport in Hollywood.

YOU would know just as surely as you know anything that some producer would sign John Wray for another crook role. His Joe Providi in Norma Talmadge's first talkie is one of the best pieces of character acting ever seen on the screen. He will play the role of Rothstein in "The Cheer of Broadway, a tale of New York night life dealing with the reign of Rothstein and the men who surrounded him in his heyday. Universal is producing the picture. Wonder if the murder of Arnold Rothstein will be featured and if so, who will get the blame on the screen.

JACK BENNY who in his spare moments acts as master of parties, has obtained his release from Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Of course, we needn't hold his master of ceremonies tendency agin him lots of our friends have been masters of ceremonies in their time. Page Benny Rubin, now that Mr. Benny has left M-G-M And, come to think of it, he didn't do much out there did he? He has signed with Tiffany to play the lead in "The Medicine Man," by Elliot Lester. Jimmy Dugan and Georgia Stone are also in the film and Percy Pembroke, Tiffany's chief comedy director, will direct. Jack Benny, in case there is every need, can double for Jack Warner. He looks more like him than either Harry or Albert Warner.

"THE Arizona Kid" will be filmed in its entirely 30 miles from Rockville, Utah. Al Santell leaves this week for a Ghost City near Rockville where every scene of this outdoor special is to be produced. I speak of this picture particularly because so many people wondered whether it is possible to film talking pictures outdoors. The inference has always been the outdoor scenes were made in the studio. Ralph Block wrote the story for "The Arizona Kid." Ralph, who was formerly supervisor for Pathe, is now associated with the Fox Company.

SNAPSHOTS of Hollywood collected at random: Ruth Roland and Ben Bard sending out valentines, closer scrutiny showed them to be invitations to their first wedding anniversary. Sue Carol and Nick Stuart, Kenneth Harlan and Rolly Ann Young among the dancers at the Coconut Grove where Michio Ito's Japanese company of Sumarai and Geishas were given their first glimpse of American night life. Jack Warner acting as host to a luncheon given for Oscar Strauss, noted musician. Mrs. Strauss wearing a purple costume and one of the guests, Bernice Claire singing Strauss's famous "Chocolate Soldier." Sally O'Neill wearing a natty red costume, lunching with her manager, Ivan Kahn at the Embassy. Claudia Dell getting her first glimpse of the Brown Derby. Blanche Sweet eating so much luncheon at Betty's Come On In Tea Room that the profits were all lost. Betty serves that kind of good home cooking. Many film folk stealing there quietly for luncheon. That's all today.

LIVES LOST IN FILM HUNT

"JANGO," a motion picture of actual scenes taken among cannibals and ferocious beasts in West Africa, will be shown for the first time in Boston at Tremont Temple, Monday evening, February 17, and twice daily thereafter for a limited engagement. The picture was filmed during a scientific expedition into parts of Africa never before penetrated by civilized white man. The purpose of the expedition was to study the tsetse fly and find a possible cure for sleeping sickness.

The expedition was lead by Dr. Louis Neuman, of Brussels, and his companions were Dr. Jacques Maus, of Antwerp, and Dr. Daniel Davenport of Moose Jaw, Saskatchewan. Dr. Davenport will appear in person to tell of his experiences. He is the sole white survivor of the expedition; Dr. Maus died of yellow fever and Dr. Neuman was killed by a rhinoceros.

The hyena, leopard, cheetah, elephant and other wild creatures of the jungle are seen in their native haunts. Nine thousand five hundred feet of film is shown and the exhibition lasts two hours and 15 minutes.

Psychic Ends Boston Stay Tomorrow

Gene Dennis, psychic, who has been interesting audiences both at Loew's State and Orpheum during the past few weeks, will conclude her Boston engagement tomorrow evening.

Miss Dennis has played before record crowds at the Loew houses all during her engagement. She has received during her stay here thousands of letters and telephone calls, soliciting her advice and aid.

GAYETY—La Villa Maye and 60 bounding Mutual burlesquers; a revue of many parts, with dancing and melody predominating. Holub's jazz orchestra contributes.

HOWARD—"The Tempters," a Mutual burlesque show, headed by a dancer known as "Tangara"; also vaudeville. On the screen, "China Bound," with Karl Dane and George K. Arthur, and "Loves of Casanova." Midnight show on Friday.

SIREN FARES FORTH ANEW

MARGARET LIVINGSTON again delineates the roles of a siren, this time in "Murder on the Roof," at the Park.

The production has one of the largest casts ever assembled by Columbia pictures, including Dorothy Revier, Raymond Hatton, David Newell, Paul Porcasi and Virginia Brown Faire.

Miss Livingston has won a reputation as one of the outstanding delineators of vampire roles. Since 1920 she has risen rapidly with finished performances in "Sunrise," "Chorus Lady," "Wandering Husbands," "Havoc," "His Private Life," "Apache," "Last Warning," and "The Bellamy Trial.' She recently portrayed the leading role in Columbia's "Acquited." In "Murder on the Roof," Miss Livingston plays an important role which serves as a foil to the actions of the heroine, portrayed by Miss Revier.

ROLE OF BRIDE LIKE VILLAIN IN PURSUIT

DOROTHY HALL, who made her musical comedy debut in George White's new musical comedy "Flying High" now at the Shubert, would never have stepped across the footlights if she had obeyed the entreaties of her family. Through an artifice, however, she was permitted to leave home. She had a flair for interior decorating, and ostensibly to pursue a career along this line she was allowed to leave. Miss Hall immediately tried to get on the stage. The going became so tough that for a time Miss Hall had to support herself by becoming a dressmaker. Her family, meanwhile, appalled at her duplicity, begged her to return to the parental fireside, but she clung desperately to the rim of Broadway, hoping to get her chance. Her persistency finally won a start for her. She managed to get several small bits here and there under the guiding hand of Clara Tree Major.

William Hurlbut, the playwright, saw her. This was an exceptionally good break, for he liked her so much that when his play, "The Bridegroom," was cast, he insisted that she have one of the more important roles.

Miss Hall has since been seen in "The Complex," "White Collars," "Speakeasy," "A Lady for a Night," "Precious," "Girl Trouble," with Ethel Barrymore in "The Love Duel," and out of "Other Men's Wives."

Matinee Idol Role for Youth in Talkie

Eddie Phillips plays the part of the matinee idol in "Chasing Rainbows," with Bessie Love and Charles King on the screen at Loew's Orpheum the coming week.

Phillips was born in Philadelphia in 1902 and had a wide stage experience before coming into pictures. He was graduated from the University of Pennsylvania. Prior to his six years on the screen, he played in the Orpheum Stock Company of Philadelphia and appeared in support of Lionel Barrymore in "The Copperhead." His first part in motion pictures was as the Italian in Mary Pickford's "The Love Light." He impersonated an Italian so well that when he applied for the role "Our Mary" thought he was one.

NOTED SINGER IN 'VODVIL'

Carmela Ponselle

CARMELA PONSELLE, famous mezzo-soprano at the Keith-Albee today, declares that American audiences are growing more and more music conscious. "I find our audiences and music lovers not only ready but eager to hear the melodies of our own composers even in preference to foreigners. American audiences are slowly but surely realizing that it is unnecessary to be foreign born and of foreign parentage to attain greatness in the fields of composition." Miss Ponselle is back in vaudeville after a season spent mainly in concert and recital. At the Keith-Albee this week she will present a cycle of songs in which American composers are emphasized.

"Nowadays it is unnecessary for a young aspirant to musical honors to receive a foreign education," Miss Ponselle says. "We find fewer and fewer cases of changing of names to foreign sounding ones. America and its people are suddenly becoming aware of our own geniuses."

Stanley Lichtenstein

Stanley Lichtenstein, New York tenor, has postponed his February 23 recital at the Repertory to Saturday afternoon, March 29, at Jordan Hall.

CRIB PARKED IN SAWDUST

OFTEN referred to as a real life Cinderella, Polly Walker, featured in "Hit the Deck," radio picture now playing at the New B. F. Keith's, started life in a circus. The twinkle in her eyes belies the heartbreak of her early days. Her earliest memory is of the soaked circus tent, where she was parked when an infant.

Snake charmers, sword swallowers and clowns were the companions of her early life. The memories of her mother's struggles to keep the wolf from the door, of the times her sister was pushed into the lion's cage to afford the spectators a thrill, formed the heritage of Polly.

In the philosophy of a favorite uncle she found the way out of the circus, out of the life she had come to dread. This uncle was the star clown of Ringling Bros. and he used to say: "Polly, always believe in yourself, child, and do things your own way."

It was this advice which was the cause of his greatest disappointment. For Polly took his advice to heart and when she was old enough she decided against circus life. She couldn't tell her uncle. The old man had his heart set on a circus career for his niece. That she should do anything else was unthinkable. But he read that Polly was appearing in a vaudeville act and for a while it saddened his life.

But Polly still treasures his memory and his philosophy in her heart.

WAVES OF SEA NOT SO SAD

Evelyn Herbert

EVELYN HERBERT, prima donna of "The New Moon," was recently granted a two weeks leave of absence by Schwab and Mandel, producers of this musical success, so that she may be thoroughly rested before opening her engagement at the Shubert on Monday, February 17. She spent the two weeks on the sands at Palm Beach to recuperate from her long and arduous season in "The New Moon" on Broadway, the longest ever achieved by an operetta in America.

There is a soft spot in Miss Herbert's heart for Boston. She made many friends here when, at the age of 18, she was singing here with the Chicago Grand Opera Company. For several years after that she had no opportunity to play in this city, but when a special company was organized to present "Princess Flavia," she persuaded the Messrs. Shubert to allow her to sing the opening performance in this city.

The four best numbers which fall to Miss Herbert's role in "The New Moon" are "Lover Come Back to Me," "One Kiss," "Wanting You" and "The Girl on the Prow."

IN THE COLLAR IS PLACE TO GET HOT

YES, it does get hot in California. While "Sally," the Marilyn Miller picture now at the Uptown and Washington st. Olympia, was in production, a hot spell arrived. The technicolor lights, twice the number used on a black-and-white picture, added to the heat, and furthermore the company was working under canvas on the First National Studio lot.

There was no thermometer on the set, but the company guessed at the temperature by watching Alexander Gray's collars wilt. Gray plays opposite Marilyn Miller, and wore high collars in one sequence during the hot spell.

The schedule went like this:

Three collars an hour—90 degrees.

Five collars an hour—100 degrees.

More than five collars an hour—write your own temperature.

Gray's laundry bill for the week can only be estimated.

"Hot stuff," was his only comment. He opined that upward of 100 collars had been purchased and used, and "guessed" he had sufficient collars to last him a lifetime in talkiedom.

JUNGLE HUNT IS COSTLY

ACCORDING to Commander G. M. Dyott whose talking picture, "Hunting Tigers in India," at 8:30 o'clock, the Indian laborer has it all over his occidental brother when it comes to determining how much work he is to do.

"We had to have a man for every job," says Commander Dyott. "The cook was a lazy fellow and would do nothing but cook. We had to have one man to carry water for him and do nothing else. Another man gathered wood and still another fed the fire. The man who swept the camp would do nothing else. One man fed each elephant, another drove the animal and still another gave him his daily bath. And so it went all down the line."

This reluctance on the part of the natives to do more than one job makes the sport of tiger hunting an expensive one, Commander Dyott says, even though wages are very low.

How a Girl Helped Her Affianced in His Business

READ THIS FIRST

Dulcy Parker's efforts to help people usually resulted in trouble, so Gordon Smith, her fiance, feared the worst when she insisted on having a week-end party for Forbes, a financier with whom he was trying to do business, and Mrs. Forbes and their daughter Angela. Dulcy also invited a new acquaintance, Schuyler Van Dyke, and a scenario writer, Vincent Leach, whom she meant to marry to Angela. Her butler was an ex-convict, Perkins. And Angela appeared wearing real pearls. Dulcy managed, the first moment she was alone with Forbes, to enrage him to the point of apoplexy by declaring that Gordon had many important interests aside from the jewelry merger which he had discussed with Forbes.

NOW READ ON

By HELEN KLUMPH

From Marion Davies' forthcoming all-talking picture by Wanda Tuchok and Edwin Justus Mayer, based on the play "Dulcy," by Marc Connelly and George Kaufman.

CHAPTER 6

THAT terrible moment when the guest of honor wondered if he had let himself in for a week-end of intolerable boredom had passed, and Forbes settled himself comfortably in the garden, at peace with the world.

It was a relief for him to be out here in the stillness, after the week he had put in worrying over his business. Gordon was sitting quietly beside him; a restful sort of chap, nothing flightly about him, Forbes decided. But Van Dyke! He couldn't understand Van Dyke! Instead of sitting here comfortably, he was out there on the lawn, practicing golf shots.

Van Dyke must have inherited his money; he certainly never made it doing silly things like that, Forbes decided.

Bill joined them.

At first, Forbes didn't remember Bill, but gradually it dawned on him that this was the sensible young man who used to call on Angela. He had liked this young Mr. Parker.

"How are you?" he asked, with real interest.

"Fine, thanks. I've been reading about you lately. Read one of your ads in the paper tonight," he went on, with mock earnestness which was quite lost on Forbes. "It said that you had made the nation Forbes-conscious. And I believe you have," he added, with what seemed reverence.

Bill saw that Forbes was taking him seriously. And enjoying it. To escape, Bill set off to join Van Dyke.

Forbes thought how much he liked Bill. Pity Angela ever let him go.

"I like young Parker," he announced, as if he were conferring a knighthood, at least. "No nonsense about him. If there is anything I can't stand it is this frivolous, gad-about way of doing things they have nowadays. They play with life—they don't work."

Gordon nodded in agreement. He would have agreed to anything Forbes said just to keep him in a pleasant mood.

Forbes paused as he saw Dulcy.

Two New Fish Boats Join Hub Fleets

Two more new fishing vessels reached the fish pier today, one from Quincy and the other from Essex yards.

The steam trawler Amherst, similar in design to the new Dartmouth that arrived last week, came for the Whitman, Ward & Lee fleet. She will be skippered by Capt. Reginald Burgess, formerly of the schooner Herbert N. Parker. The new dragger Gertrude N. Fauci was the other arrival, having been built at Essex. Capt. Maurice Benia of the schooner Frances C. Denehy will be in command of her. She is similar to the Marris Stella.

B. C. Glee Club at Fall River Feb. 14

The feature of the opening concert of the Boston College Musical Club at Fall River on February 14 will be a vocal arrangement of Tennyson's "Princess," with the glee club being assisted by the orchestra.

The soloists with the club this year are Edward P. Burns, '30, bass; Kevin Hern, '31, tenor, and Paul Mahoney, '31, baritone.

Shoplifter Jailed

After receiving one month's suspended sentence in jail in municipal court today for shoplifting Martin Bryson, 23, of Broadway, Salem, was turned over to Inspector Murphy of Peabody to be questioned in connection with six house breaks in that city last week.

White Elephants Prove to Be Anything But When Junior League Girls Sell 'Em

Piled up pachyderms were soon disposed of when Miss Dorothy Hall, Junior Leaguer, got busy at the White Elephant sale at the Majestic Theater. They went like the proverbial "hot cakes." (Staff photos.)

Little Antoinette Lupio, eight years old, gave some sage advice to a group of elephants at the Majestic Theater and, incidentally, proved of great assistance to the Junior League members while they were selling the elephants for sweet charity's sake. Maybe some of the purchasers are designing to preserve the pachyderms to wave at Connie Mack next summer.

Two smart saleswomen of the Junior League, who succeeded in disposing of more white elephants than ever were in Siam at the Majestic Theater charity drive. They are shown comparing notes.

MARSINO AIDED BY PONZI 'TIP'

If Joseph B. Marsino raises $15,000 bail so he can be freed from State Prison, he will have Charles Ponzi to thank for discovery of the technicality that provides for his release.

Ponzi, according to Edwin B. Norman, assistant district attorney of Worcester, "tipped off" Marsino that he was entitled to bail inasmuch as the State had appealed the federal court decision that he was unlawfully incarcerated.

Ponzi and Marsino have been very friendly and the erstwhile North End banker and lawyer saw the loophole.

But there are yet a lot of "ifs" to Marsino's case.

If he could get the bail he could get out of State Prison, but if he did that he would be arrested by Erie County, New York, officers to answer criminal complaints relating to his activities in the Niagara Life Insurance Co. And if New York police didn't arrest him, a Worcester County sheriff would on indictments under which he never has been tried.

DePriest at Forum

Oscar DePriest of Chicago, the only colored man in Congress, will speak at the Old South Meeting House Forum tomorrow afternoon on the question "Does the Negro Need a Political Party [illegible] His Own?"

Steins All Right, But Beer Must Be 'Near'

Talk about tempests in teapots There was a tempest in near-beer steins as owners of near-beer dispensaries fell over themselves to telephone the City Licensing Board to inquire about a story that all such places were to be closed up, so that Boston would look outwardly bone-dry for the tercentenary.

Chairman D. T. Montague informed all that the story as it appeared was a lot of nonsense. If any old-time bars over which near-beer is now consumed are shut down, they will be shut down only because disorder characterizes the near-beer place or because it is otherwise a community nuisance.

The board is taking a census of such establishments in Boston, with the aid of the police, preparatory to supervising their conduct more closely.

This action, Chairman Montague said, is merely a matter of routine, and has not the faintest relation to the tercentenary.

GIRL SCOUTS IN SESSION

The second day of the conference of Metropolitan Division, Girl Scouts, began this morning in the auditorium of Brookline high school. The opening ceremony was conducted by Winnifred Turner, vice-chairman, who also introduced the theme of the morning's speeches and discussions, "World Friendliness."

The first speaker was Alice Magnant of Quincy, who talked on "Friendly Through Camping," explaining what camping should mean to girls in broadening their outlook on life and in giving them lasting friendships.

Next there was a speech on "World Scouting and Guiding" by Mildred Furber of Melrose, who told some of the aspects of scouting in faraway lands.

Ardell Held on Larceny Charges

Richard Ardell, alias Richrad O-Dell, claiming to live on Carver st., pleaded not guilty to the charge of larceny from two young women. He pleaded guilty to the charge of driving an automobile without being licensed and was held for trial on the more serious charges.

The indictments accuse him of obtaining $100 from Maud A. Roscoe, who operates a test house in Weld st., West Roxbury, on June 21, 1929; $150 and $100 on July 1 and July 9 from her, and also on July 1 that he obtained $250 from Alice H. Plummer and on July 19 $500 from the same girl.

PARKING BAN IN UNION SQUARE

Mayor John J. Murphy of Somerville, with Chief of Police Thomas Damery and Captain Ernest Howard in charge of the traffic division, conferred with representatives of the Boston Elevated in an endeavor to relieve the traffic congestion in Union sq.

The conference resulted in a plan to ban parking on one side of the square, so busses can drive up to the curbing. It is also planned to have the inbound Somerville ave. cars stop just before entering the square to take on and permit passengers to alight. The outbound stop on the same line has been moved up, so that traffic can go through Stone ave.

Central sq. buses will park on Webster ave. instead of the center of the square. With these changes officials believe that the traffic situation will be much improved.

Governor's Wife Given Name Tanda

Mrs. Frank G. Allen will henceforth be known in Camp Fire Girl circles as Tanda, a name bestowed upon her at the Norwood junior high school, where the Norwood council of the Camp Fire Girls gathered to watch the presentation. Tanda is an Indian name meaning "love, honor and respect."

Babes Hungry as Dad Hunts for Job in Vain

In a shabby room on Shawmut ave. the wails of an under-nourished infant mingle with the sobs of a desperate young mother today, while the father tramps the streets looking for work.

Homeless, jobless and friendless, Joseph Lewangie is battling the wolf from the door where his wife and two babies found temporary shelter after being ejected from their lodgings on Tremont st. for overdue rent.

"I am young and strong and willing to work at anything—pick and shovel if necessary, to secure bread for my family," the young father declared.

"I have had no steady income since I left the coast guard service last August and now I haven't a cent to carry on with. I have never asked for charity and I hope I never shall need to. All I ask is a job, any job at all."

Four weeks ago the new baby arrived and the young mother has not had proper food to nourish it. The older child, Richard, is 18 months old.

"Through the kindness of the traffic officer, Eaton and others in the neighborhood, we have had milk for Richard," Mrs. Lewangie said. "But the rent got ahead of us and when we owed $23 the landlady put us out. But surely my husband can find some sort of work before another week—he just must have work."

The plight of the little family was brought to the attention of the Boston Evening American by Traffic Officer Ralph Eaton of Division 21, to whom the young father appealed for aid in finding work when notified that he must vacate the Tremont st. lodgings by evening.

"I went to his room and found his young wife and both the little ones crying while she packed their few belongings," Officer Eaton said. "I know my wife wouldn't let those babies suffer so I offered to share our two-room place with them. I have four children of my own, and it is hard for me to get along too, but those babies have to be fed and that young mother be taken care of."

But Lewangie, too proud to accept this offer, borrowed $2 to pay for a room on Shawmut ave. and continued to hunt work. He carried their things in a basket, having pawned their trunk for money to buy food.

MULHERN DEMANDS ALLEN ACT TO CURB CIVIL SERVICE BOARD

REJECTION OF FOUR CURLEY MEN FLAYS

Senator Calls Governor's Attention to the Fact That Goodwin Is His Choice

Complaint of the Civil Service Commission's rejection of four major appointees of Mayor Curley this week was made today by State Senator Joseph J. Mulhern of Boston in a letter to Governor Allen.

According to Mulhern, the people of Boston are surprised and perplexed and "it seems clear that you should take action immediately to make known to the people of this city the reasons" why the commission failed to approve these men.

Mulhern reminds the governor that Chairman Elliot H. Goodwin of the Civil Service Commission, whom he has repeatedly attacked in the past, is no longer a holdover from a previous administration, but now an Allen appointee.

COP RISKS LIFE TO SAVE MAN

A middle-aged Malden man is staging a gallant fight to live in Chelsea Memorial Hospital today unaware of the praise that is being showered on the Chelsea patrolman who rescued him from the icy, oil-covered waters of Island End river.

William F. Garrity is the hero policeman and he spent the night in the same hospital following the severe chill he received in his plunge into the water. He is expected to be sent to his home today.

The man he rescued is Daniel King, 50, of Julia st., Malden, who was helpless when pulled from the river by other Chelsea policemen who had accompanied Garrity to the scene and had completed the rescue, after Garrity had passed a rope around the body of the victim.

The rescue followed a report from a watchman that a man was clinging to one of the piles of a wharf of the New England Structural Company, his head barely above water.

Owing to the darkness it was almost impossible to see the head of the victim, who was about 15 feet below the wharf level. From the oily water a thick streaming lumination to be had was from vapor was rising and the only il- the flashlights carried by Sergt. Edward Forbes and Patrolmen Garrity, Matthew Flaherty, Richard A'Hearn, Thomas Jones, Fred McCormack, William Lynch and John Tully.

When finally located, King was gripping tightly to the piling. A rope was thrown to him but he was unable to attempt to hold it. He embraced the piling with both arms and gradually he appeared to be sliding down the slippery surface.

Realizing that once the man disappeared he would be lost, Garrity doffed his hat and coat and then, taking one end of the rope, plunged into the water.

The rays of the electric flashlights focussed on the head of King enabled him to locate the helpless man and reach his side. King was unable to give Garrity any assistance and the officer, with considerable difficulty passed the end of the rope beneath King's arms, around his body and then tied it securely. He shouted to his brother officers to pull and King was raised to the wharf level.

The theft occurred between 8 p. m. and 7 a. m., being discovered when employes opened the office for work.

Fingerprint experts were sent to the place and an investigation was also launched to determine the kind of explosive used. It was the first high explosive safe job in the city for a long time. The safe was unusually large and heavy.

Crippled Schooner Arrives in Port

After losing a propeller on Georges Bank, the fishing schooner Waltham II returned to the fish pier today with a split catch of only 900 pounds of mixed fish.

Capt. Merton Huchins, skipper, said he struck a log soon after the nets were cast. With auxiliary power gone, he made his way to the outer harbor under sail, where the Ross towboat Pow Wow picked him up.

Bank Girls Save Cash as Flames Rage

While flames raced through the basement of the building, sending clouds of smoke upstairs, 17 girls and four men employes of the Medford Trust Co., remained at their posts long enough to place thousands of dollars in money and official records in a large vault before fleeing to the street.

The blaze, starting in the basement in some rubbish in a coal bin, filled the Medford sq. section with smoke and caused two alarms to be sounded. Firemen worked at the bank for more than an hour before extinguishing the fire.

With the arrival of firemen, the girls calmly informed them that the fire was in the cellar and kept putting the money and bank records away for safe keeping.

Several of the girls remained inside the bank so long that they were partly affected by the smoke. None left the bank, however, until all of the money had been placed in the large vault.

The fire was discovered by Miss Gladys Ritchie. She informed Telephone Operator Miss Gladys Gill, who sent the first call to Medford firemen. Patrolman William McCarthy, doing traffic duty in Medford sq., saw the smoke, raced to the bank, then sounded a second alarm from box 13.

He then stood at the bank doorway with his revolver holster open and guarded the bank while the girls were working frantically to get everything put away. The bank had been closed about an hour.

BILL TO PROBE SOLDIERS' HOME FUND IS LOST

Spanish War Veteran Fails to Convince Solons That Report Is Necessary

The petition of William H. Barrett, dismissed from "membership" in the Soldiers' Home at Chelsea, asking that the trustees be required to make a detailed report of expenditures of State appropriations, has been rejected by the Legislature. The adverse report of the committee on State administration was accepted without division or debate.

The committee took the matter under consideration after receiving assurance from Colonel Keville, one of the trustees, and Secretary Maccabe that any application for reinstatement by Barrett, next March, would be entertained "without prejudice."

Col. Keville related that it had already been recommended by the trustees to a legislative committee that as soon as the Soldiers' Home, now a private institution, became populated by less than five per cent veterans of the Civil War, it should be taken over by the state, a contingency likely to arise by 1934 or 1935 at the latest.

Barrett's chief complaint was that Spanish War veterans are discriminated against at the institution. He also insisted that medical treatment was lax. One veteran had not been bathed in three weeks, though near death; that 20 veterans were ejected from their rooms to make space for the girls' dormitory; and that the sounds of merriment from the student nurses' quarters at night disturbed the veteran inmates.

Milder Weather Sweeps East to N. E.

A low pressure area that centered over the Ohio valley yesterday moved to New England during the night and brought milder weather.

The minimum temperature in Boston today was 24 at 4 a. m., while the lowest for New England was 1 above at Northfield, Vt.

There was a light snow storm through most of New England over the past 12 hours. The heaviest fall reported was three inches at Eastport, Me. A trace was reported during the night in Boston. The weather bureau predicted partly cloudy weather today and tomorrow with not much change in temperature.

ORDER CUTTER ON ICE PATROL

Alarmed by the appearance of two large icebergs in the westbound shipping track, the coast guard ordered the cutter Tampa on ice patrol today, nearly two months in advance of the regular patrol.

The Tampa is under orders to leave the navy yard Monday in charge of Commander Stanley V. Parker.

Today's orders are the earliest ever issued for ice patrol since the inauguration of the service following the memorable Titanic disaster in 1913.

The Tampa will shortly be relieved by the cutter Mojave, which is outfitting now for the regular ice patrol. The cutter Modoc is also outfitting for the dangerous job.

Coast guard officials were unable to explain the appearance of the big bergs at this early date other than the prevalence of high winds that are breaking big chunks off the Greenland ice cap.

"Negro Night" at Ford Hall Forum

Two outstanding leaders of the colored race will occupy the platform at Ford Hall Forum tomorrow evening on the occasion of the annual Negro Night of the forum.

They are Miss Nannie H. Burroughs, president of the National Training School for Women and Girls at Washington, D. C., and Alain Leroy Locke, professor of philosophy at Howard University.

Rogers Calls Authors of Today Too Refined

"American literature has been since the end of the Dickens' era 50 years ago, too refined and ladylike, the sort of thing taught in dame schools, aside from the work of Mark Twain," according to Prof. Robert E. Rogers of Tech, speaking at the dinner of the 118th anniversary of Dickens at the Statler.

Prof. Rogers declared Dickens the last of the great popular novelists of the people and of democracy, who lived in a matter-of-fact world. After him there was no novelist who could live in so stable a world as he, because "his world had given away to one of vanishing hopefulness in which there grew up doubts as to whether humanity was or was not a little higher than the animals."

Present-day writers, novelists and dramatists, the speaker declared, are nevertheless showing in their work the influence of Dickens, Bernard Shaw in the peculiar humor of some of his character-creations, Gilbert K. Chesterton in his flamboyance and extravagance in description, and H. G. Wells and several others in different ways.

Wherever there are attempts today to describe the world of the common people Dickens' influence will be found, Prof. Rogers asserted, adding: "the more we get of the Dickens' type of description of characters, conditions and things, the better will be our literature."

RETURN OF PIN ENDS SUITS

John D. MacBeth, Cambridge clerk, has been successful in his legal fight to recover a fraternity pin from another clerk, Miss Mary M. Thompson, also of Cambridge.

When a bill in equity recently filed by MacBeth for recovery of the Delta Sigma Nu pin, given him by his mother, came up before Judge Qua in Middlesex Superior Court for hearing, Atty. Leo Looney, counsel for the plaintiff, informed the court that the emblem had been returned.

3 Fugitives From Bridgewater Caught

While police of Boston and other cities today sought three inmates of Bridgewater state farm who escaped last night, Corp. Francis McDonald of the state police captured them at Rehoboth.

The three men, Francis Tinkham, 27, George Sheridan, 31, both of Worcester, and Daniel J. Moran, 21, of Taunton, told McDonald they climbed the flagpole in the recreation yard and "hid" there until darkness, a story which the authorities doubted. It was their second escape.

Court Rules for Mayor of Everett

Judge Bishop in Superior Court today denied a petition of Peter Cameron and other voters of Everett, under the Corrupt Practices Act, to void the election of Michael C. O'Neil as mayor of Everett.

The petitions claimed a much larger amout of money was expended at the recent primary and election than was allowed by law. Atty. James J. Irwin, representing the petitioners, charged that Everett for seven years was the hotbed of election graft.

GOW IS DEAF TO APPEAL FROM HOOVER

Resignation Irrevocable; Hurley Will Be Acting Postmaster

President Hoover's plea that Postmaster Charles R. Gow remain in office will fall on deaf ears, it was indicated today in the disclosure that Gow's resignation was submitted as "irrevocable."

At the same time Postmaster Gow was awaiting the letter from Postmaster-General Brown, which was reported to be on the way from Washington, and which, it is understood, will contain the appeal.

DELAYS DECISION

Col. Gow feels that the big corporation of which he has become the head, needs his services more than the United States Government, or rather the Republican party.

Assistant Postmaster William E. Hurley will be definitely chosen to serve as acting postmaster during the interim of several months which will elapse between the time Col. Gow relinquishes the office and the appointment of a successor.

Among politicians the belief is that ex-Mayor Malcolm Nichols will be appointed postmaster. Among men mentioned for the postmastership are Collector of Internal Revenue Thomas W. White, Edward T. Clark, formerly Coolidge's secretary; Edwin H. Pearson, supervising architect and chief engineer of the federal government in Boston, the man in charge of the construction of the new postoffice, and Assistant Postmaster Hurley.

Former Postmaster Baker, whose reappointment to office last March for a third term was blocked by Republican leaders, will undoubtedly have a difficult row to hoe to capture the position notwithstanding that it is under civil service.

PRAISED BY FULLER

Baker is, of course, aware of the handicap he is up against because of lack of favor but nevertheless he intends to "take a fling" at the position. Beyond announcing his intention to file an application to take the civil service examination.

For several years now, Baker has been an enrolled Republican. Baker is 64 years old, and a year ago when he took the civil service examination with Col. Gow and others for the postmastership, he ranked second to Col. Gow.

Gow's rating was 84.20 per cent, and to this was added five points under the veteran's preference law, while Baker obtained a rating of 82.20.

Warns Boston Banks of Bad $20 Bills

Bankers and merchants in Boston and 50 miles outside today were warned by the secret service to be on the lookout for counterfeit $20 bills, which have been circulated freely in this section.

At about the same time secret service agents arrested Nicola Bevilacqua, 51, South End, on a warrant charging him with being a fugitive from justice from New York.

According to the New York authorities Bevilacqua is one of a large group indicted by a Federal grand jury in that city, six already being under arrest, for issuing large amounts of counterfeit $10 bills.

HUNTER PICKED TO WIN TITLE

New York, [illegible] (AP)—Two players of different tennis generations [illegible] marking [illegible] style [illegible] the [illegible] for the national indoor [illegible] championship.

Frank Hunter, 35-year-old New Rochelle newspaper publisher, and Julius Seligson, Lehigh University senior, were to meet in what promised to be a battle of baseline drives.

The finalists for the doubles title won last year by Tilden and Hunter were [illegible] Murphy, Utica, N. Y., and Harris Coggeshall, Des Moines, Iowa, vs. [illegible] and [illegible] New York.

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., Feb. 8—Jack Sharkey and Johnny Buckley were followed by Louis K. Reynolds, chairman of the Miami Boxing Commission, Mr. Boston and a flock of newspaper writers, when he appeared at the office of the City Clinic to submit to physical examination.

Sharkey had just filed his application for a license as a boxer [illegible] requires each applicant to be examined by a member of the [illegible]

Jack Conway

"How [illegible] you, Sharkey?" asked [illegible] examining [illegible] "Twenty-[illegible]" replied [illegible]

"Well, that [illegible] first [illegible] Sharkey [illegible] blood pressure test [illegible] 826 over 76 [illegible]"

"What does that mean?" [illegible] Mr. Boston.

"That his blood pressure [illegible]" answered the [illegible]

"NOW do some road work here and I'll take your blood pressure again [illegible]"

Sharkey [illegible] skipped [illegible] examination [illegible]

[illegible] perfect [illegible] blood pressure [illegible] test [illegible]

"My blood pressure [illegible] when I [illegible] with Scott," replied Sharkey, good naturedly.

"Mine won't," chirped Johnny Buckley.

"Blood pressure is an awful nuisance," asserted Buckley.

"But don't forget to watch it," said the medical man.

THE examining doctor then took Sharkey's measurement.

Reach 73½ inches," he said. [illegible] inches, ankle 9½ inches [illegible] neck 16½ inches [illegible] inches, chest (normal) [illegible] expanded [illegible]

"He'll do," said the doctor. "A perfect specimen of young American manhood."

"I hope he keeps that way for four or five more years," chirped Buckley. "I can then retire and play golf."

AFTER Sharkey dressed, he stepped on the scales. He weighed 212 pounds.

"I would allow six pounds for Sharkey's clothes and shoes," [illegible] Buckley. "This means he is at the right weight for this stage of his training. He has ample time to take off ten pounds. The fight is still almost three weeks away."

MR. BOSTON didn't have to [illegible] around the training camps. A shower caused Sharkey and Scott to lay off. Johnny Buckley spent the day trying to line up some new sparring partners.

George Cook, Australian heavyweight, has quit camp. He declared that Sharkey's heavy body punches had injured his right [illegible]

Johnny Grosso, New York heavyweight, is still on the job [illegible] his left side [illegible]

"It looks as though Sharkey is [illegible] harder than ever," said Mr. Boston. "He says he will stop Scott inside of six rounds and Cook and Grosso at least, say [illegible]."

MR. BOSTON retains his perfect record as a picker of winners. Mr. Boston picked Sammy Fuller to win over Benny Bass at the Garden. Fuller won on a foul. Although this is not the way Mr. Boston figured the fight to end, his slate is still clean.

Here it is.

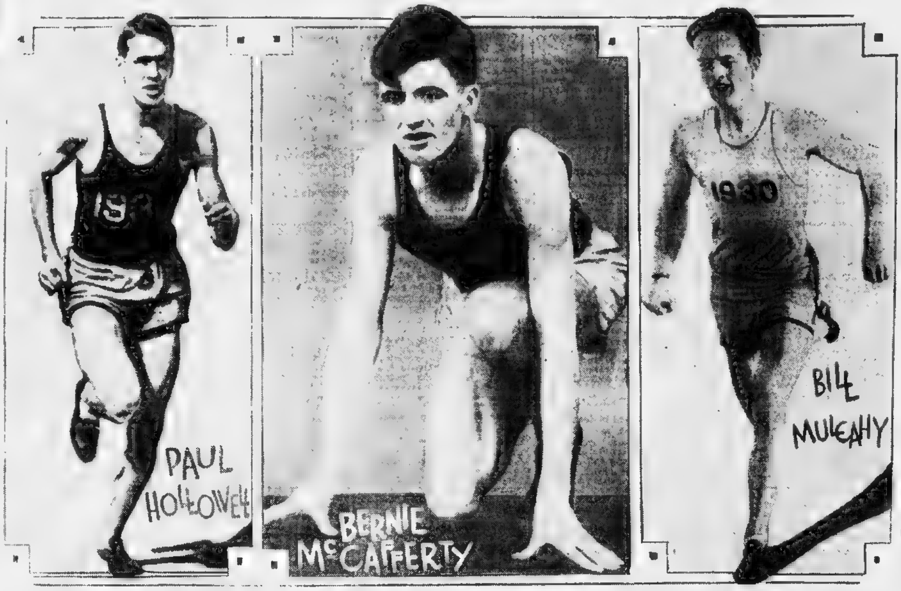
BAY STATE HOPES IN MILLROSE TRACK MEET TONIGHT



These three Bay State college track stars will be watched closely in the annual Millrose meet in New York tonight. Pen Hallowell, Harvard middle distance runner, competes in the 1000-yard feature race and is expected to be among the leaders. Bernie McCafferty of Holy Cross races in the Millrose 600-yard special. He is one of the greatest middle distance runners in the country and is a favorite to win. Bill Mulcahy, Boston College track captain, runs in the B. C. one mile relay team, which meets Holy Cross and Georgetown in a three cornered clash. The Millrose games annually attract the best runners of the world.

District School Track Title at Stake Today

AN army of Boston school trackmen invade the East Armory this afternoon for the finals of the track events of the annual district school meet.

Hyde Park is favorite to come through in front. Skip Sherlock's boys have 33 points, gained in the field events of the meet, which were staged Tuesday last and 25 of them qualified for the finals of the running events today.

Brighton High has 15 points and is strong. Satchebell probably will win in the dash, and there are several other fast youths among the 15 Brighton qualifiers.

East Boston, with 26 men qualified, is also a strong contender. C. Lanieri of the Noddle Island team should push Satchebell in the 50 yard dash.

A new record may be set up in this race, for both boys did 6 seconds in qualifying on Monday. The record, held by Ralph Cosen, is 5 4-5 seconds.

Ernie [illegible], in the senior hurdles, is a dependable East Boston performer. He is very fast over the stick and has perfect form.

Memorial High with 23 boys qualified, has a chance to win. Strength is evenly distributed on Tom Campbell's team from Roxbury, and so the group is in a position to force either Hyde Park or East Boston.

The other schools, with the number of boys qualified for the races today, are Charlestown, 17; Jamaica Plain, 15 and South Boston, 12.

Newton trackmen go to the Brookline outdoor board track this afternoon for their second meeting with the Wealthy Towners. Each year these teams battle twice, once on each track, and total the points for a final settlement.

Newton won the first half of the meet by a big margin, a couple of weeks ago. Brookline should give the Garden City boys a battle today, but hardly can hope to overcome the great lead of the visitors.

Victory Means Tour for McCoy

Bob "Bibber" McCoy of Cambridge, whose wrestling has been the most sensational of the season, will meet one of the hardest tests of his career when he battles Renato Gardini, Italian champion, in a finish match at the Arena next Thursday night.

McCoy will be making his first appearance in the [illegible] since the night some weeks ago when he met Gus Sonnenberg. That bout established McCoy as one of the world's best wrestlers.

Since then, he has been deluged with offers from New York, Philadelphia, Tulsa and Los Angeles, and if he gets past the experienced, capable Gardini, he will step out of town to make his debut in other parts of the country.

Arlington and Melrose Win

Melrose beat Newton, 5 to 0, and Arlington beat Stoneham, 3 to 2, in the first round of the Interscholastic Hockey league championship series at the Arena, last night.

ICE TWIN-BILL AT GARDEN

Melrose high faces the most important game of its exhibition schedule at the Boston Garden this afternoon when it plays Harvard freshmen in one end of a doubleheader. In the other game, the Harvard varsity second team will play Northeastern College.

Melrose is conceded the scholastic championship of this section by all the experts and as the Melrose high faculty does not permit post-season games the team is concentrating on the Crimson yearling clash today.

Harvard seconds expect a lively game with Northeastern College. Eddie Mays and Charlie Havens, of football fame, play for the Harvard seconds.

Friedman to Finish Training in Hub

A REPETITION of his crushing knockout victory scored at the expense of "Big Boy" Rawson, Dorchester heavyweight, will be the goal of Al Friedman, popular Roslindale heavyweight, when he meets Jimmy Maloney of South Boston at the reopening of the Argonne A. A., next Wednesday night at Mechanics Building.

Friedman, one of the most dangerous punchers that has appeared in a Hub ring in many years, had Ernie Schaaf rocking on his heels in all three bouts in which they met.

The net proceeds of the opening Argonne show will be turned over to the fund for the benefit of the family of the late Patrolman James Troy, and it is expected that it will be the most successful benefit show ever staged in the Hub.

The Roslindale boy's aggressive style and his hard hitting right hand make him a most formidable opponent for the peninsula idol.

DUE TOMORROW

Friedman, who has trained harder for this bout than any other of his career, leaves Philadelphia today for Boston, for he is planning a workout tomorrow at Jim Toland's gymnasium. He plans three hard days of training here, and he expects to be in prime condition for this test.

The popular Hebrew has punched his way to the front faster in the past few months than any heavyweight in the game. Although only 22 years old, Friedman is one of the best heavyweights of the present era.

Maloney is spending more time in the gymnasium in preparation for the bout than ever before, as he realizes that a defeat will prove disastrous for him.

BIG CROWD EXPECTED

One of the greatest throngs that ever invaded the Hub is expected to turn out for this show. Without question the two most popular heavyweights ever developed in this city will swap wallops and for this reason it is almost certain that hundreds will be turned away.

One of the biggest advance sales of the season has been registered and fans are advised to get their tickets early at the Argonne A. A. office, 7 Water st., Liberty 2176, 2177.

Jones Signs to Meet Hagen on Mat

Bringing back to Boston the sensational young Texan heavyweight wrestler, Paul Jones, who stunned the fans last Wednesday night by pinning Dick Shikat to the mat in [illegible] minutes with his punishing hook-scissors, Promoter Tex Avery announced that he would pit him against George Hagen, Brooklyn bonecrusher, in the semifinal of his show next Tuesday in Mechanics Hall.

One of the greatest cards ever arranged for wrestling fans of Greater Boston has been completed with Jack Taylor, Canadian champion, who outdid Jimmy Londos last Wednesday, meeting Shikat in the main bout.

By BILL GRIMES

ALTHOUGH they have been on the losing end of four of the five games played with the Indians, the Tigers are confident that they will turn in their second victory over Springfield tonight at the Boston Garden.

The Indians, more than any other club, are responsible for the Tigers being down in a tie for third place in the Can-Am race. The Tigers and the Indians have played three games at the Garden this season and the Indians have taken every decision and the Carroll coached team has broken even with the Canadian American League champions at Springfield.

Bill Grimes

Since the Tigers and the Indians met in Springfield two weeks ago, the Boston sextet has not lost a game. They have been playing their best hockey of the year, twice having defeated the New Haven Eagles and also conquering Philadelphia.

Although Eddie Oatman's suspension has been lifted, Bill Regan will start on the defense for the Tigers providing he has sufficiently recovered from the knee injury he suffered in Philadelphia.

Regan will team up with Reg Mackey on the points protecting Herb Rheaume, but Oatman and Ponzi Contant will be added to the colors as frequently as Manager Powers deems it necessary.

WAITE LEADING SCORER

Capt. "Deacon" Waite will start at center, flanked by Johnny Loucks and Yank Boyd. Waite is well out in front of the leading scorer of the league and judging from the article of hockey he has been playing since he recovered from the slump which was brought about by overwork, he will continue to set the pace.

Loucks and Boyd have both been scoring of late, rounding out a fine attack for the Tigers.

Reg Mills will work at center on the second line with Clark Heyd and Eddie Burke on the wings and Sonny Manning and Dutch Osbourne will also do relief duty.

The Indians will not be as strong tonight as they were on their last trip to the Garden. The New York Rangers have recalled Sparky Vail and Leo Queneville but only sent one player, Orville Heximer to replace these two stars.

Heximer is the youngster Col. John S. Hammond picked up from the junior grade of amateur hockey in Niagara Falls. He was offered and accepted a large contract from the generous Col. Hammond, but as he was at least a couple of years short of major league ability, he was shipped to Springfield by Manager Lester Patrick.

HEXIMER ON SECOND LINE

Manager Frank Carroll will start Heller, Carrigan and Dillon on the front line, with Tilsey Callighen and Everett McGowan on the outer defense and Lamontagne in the nets. Young Heximer will play with the second line relieving Dillon, teaming up with Chief Maracle and Siebert.

According to [illegible], Everett McGowan did not draw a suspension for his fight with Norm Shay, in New Haven last Sunday night, and will play this evening. Shay and McGowan were given majors for their trouble on the ice and ordered out of the rink by the police for fighting in the penalty box.

A victory over the Indians will give the Tigers full possession of third place, a berth which they are now sharing with the Philadelphia Arrows and also their first victory at home over the Indians.

'LOVE WORTH WAITING FOR,' BY MISS FAIRFAX

Modern Girl Urged to Hold to the Right Man

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

An Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage

Beatrice Fairfax

WAS Penelope, heroine of Homer's Odyssey, wise to wait 20 years for the return of the husband whom fate had torn from her? Would it not have been much wiser and more pleasant to seek consolation in a new love? Is any man worth such loyalty and loneliness worth waiting for during the best days of youth?

No was the consensus when this subject came up at a certain tea table the other day. What do you think? Is it wise to wait for a fine love and to make yourself in every way worthy of winning and holding that love, resisting the easy way to quick popularity, keeping your standards high?

Penelope, as of course you know, was the beautiful wife of the best and bravest of the old Greek heroes. Her husband Odysseus, according to legend, was summoned to the Trojan war soon after their marriage. And while he went unwillingly, he distinguished himself as the best soldier and adviser among the Greeks. When the war was over, storms and tempests, shipwreck and magic spells of evil kept Odysseus wandering over the face of the earth for 20 years.

During this time Penelope heard nothing of her husband's fate. She was sought after by many suitors. To put them off Penelope promised her answer as soon as she should finish the garment she was weaving. But every night she unraveled what she wove during the day in order to gain time. After three years of this tactful management she was relieved at last by her husband's return. The two were, according to Homer's story, joyously reunited and spent the remainder of their lives peacefully and happily.

The opinion was expressed by some at the tea-table discussion that had Penelope been a sensible, enlightened, modern woman she would have accepted the attentions offered her without any sense of restraint due to loyalty to an absentee husband.

Penelope is the typical womanly woman—the woman to love. Real love is the most priceless gift life has to offer—a gift for which the real woman gladly pays the price of a life-time of faith, trust, devotion to high ideals. For such love of a good man, she feels the world is well lost.

Penelope loved Odysseus. She believed in him. She knew that if he could, when he could, he would return to her and their home and child. And her faith was justified.

Penelope was the type of woman who makes home a possibility and motherhood a miracle of love and peace and joy. It was of such a woman that a well known American said recently: "I was fortunate in marrying as perfect a young woman as ever lived. My children have had a marvelous mother, a superb home-maker. Of all the blessings received by me she was the greatest."

Beyond all calculation, for it is infinite, is the influence of such a woman. Her husband safely trusts in her and he is blessed by her love and devotion, and saved ultimately from the Scyllas and Charybdis, Calypsos and Circes of this world that lie in wait for him.

The joy of the reunion of Penelope and Odysseus after those long years of waiting cannot be measured. And even while they were separated, who shall say there was not some mysterious, unseen communion between their souls that made it possible for both to carry on?

Every girl can be, if she wills to be, a Penelope girl—the girl the girl who never cheapens or vulgarizes love—the girl who keeps cheerful and true to her ideals and waits until the man comes whom she can look up to and respect as well as love. There are many such men in the world if you look for them, girls—heroes in the unromantic modern fashion, but none the less heroes—for every good man is a hero to the woman who loves him.

Wait for Mr. Right—do not throw yourself away by means of necking and drinking and cheap, shoddy popularity with Tom, Dick and Harry. It is not always easy to refuse unworthy, counterfeit love, flashy, gay pleasures that lure you. But real love, marriage, home and children, love that deepens after marriage into mutual companionship, help and sympathetic understanding and affection—and the sunset glow—is not such love worth waiting and struggling for?

THE ALPHABET QUILT—BLOCK 23—WINDMILL

PERHAPS it was due to the fact that the members had made so many blocks and done them so well that made Nancy ambitious in her next-to-last block of the alphabet quilt.

But she assured the members that the pattern was not as complicated as it looked at first glance.

"As you will see, the windmill arms are all of the same pattern. One simply places them at different angles.

"Then the windmill frame is in one piece with the door appliqued on top of it. And the small flowers at the base are embroidered. I would use lazy daisy stitch for the leaves and outline or satin stitch for the flowers. The stems are in fine outline stitch of course. So is the base line. Here is my color scheme: The windmill frame is gray, the door is a rich blue and the windmill arms are of a white and rose print. All of these materials are fast color. I have tried them to see. I am using these particular ones, because I happen to have these scraps on hand. I did not want to buy any more materials since the quilt is so nearly finished.

A piece of white gingham, 6¾ inches square, was cut and laid over the paper square which had been cut from the paper. By holding the cloth over the paper and pressing the two against the window frame it was possible to draw the pattern on the cloth by using a sharp-pointed lead pencil.

The paper square was then pasted on to piece of light weight tagboard or cardboard and dried under pressure.

Next the initial "W" was embroidered. Nancy chose fast [illegible] green embroidery cotton and [illegible] a fine outline stitch. She might have done it chain stitch.

When the paper pattern was thoroughly dry the various parts of the pattern were cut. Only one windmill paper arm was cut out since all four were alike and one pattern could serve for four cloth arms.

The flowers were entirely disregarded at this time.

The paper patterns were laid on pieces of cloth and outlines were cut [illegible] allowing a quarter-inch on all sides. This gave a raw edge for turning under. The turned under edge was basted and then the pieces were pressed.

First the building itself or frame was appliqued with fine slanting [illegible] stitches. To get the correct placement the frame was laid on the penciled lines on the white block.

Then the four windmill arms were appliqued. They were laid over the frame. The door was laid on top of the frame and appliqued in place.

A round dot was embroidered at the spot where the four arms seemed to have been joined.

Then the flowers and the base line were embroidered. And that left the block "Y" for next week.

The next Alphabet Quilt Block will be published Wednesday, February 12.

Pudding's the Thing

Martha Lee

PIES may be our national dessert but give me a good pudding especially a pudding with a delicious hard sauce, or a rich cream sauce, which makes the pudding better tasting, besides adding, psychologically, to its richness and opulence.

And to make this gourmet feel better we ought to tell him that puddings during the cold weather are particularly good for the expanding of his energy, since most of them contain flour, sugar and cream, besides many other things good for energy calories, and all of them should contain fruit, which makes the pudding more delectable as well as more healthful.

Here are recipes for a couple of puddings which contain fruit as well as many other foods good to eat. One of them is served with a delicious cream sauce, and the other with a creamy hard sauce. Both recipes have been tested and can be depended upon.

FRUIT AND NUT PUDDING

To 1 cup dry bread crumbs add 1½ cups flour sifted with 2¾ tsps. baking powder, ½ tsp. salt, ¼ tsp. nutmeg and ¼ tsp. cinnamon. Mix 2-3 cup brown sugar, 2-3 cup chopped suet, ½ cup chopped walnuts, ¼ cup chopped dates and add to the first mixture. Add 2 well beaten eggs and 1 cup sour milk mixed with ½ tsp. soda. Add 1 one-pound can of figs, which have been well drained and cut fine. Fill a greased mold 2-3 full, cover tightly with the mold cover or with a waxed paper and then a wet cheese cloth into which some flour has been rubbed. Steam 2 hours. Serve with the following sauce. This is a large pudding and will serve from 16 to 20, as it is rich and the servings must not be too large. It will keep for weeks and can be steamed as needed.

SAUCE

Boil the syrup from the can of figs and 3 tbsps. sugar to 238 deg. or until it spins a thread. Beat 2 egg yolks well, pour syrup over slowly and beat constantly. Add ½ tsp. vanilla. Just before serving add 1 cup heavy, stiffly beaten cream and beat together.

GRAPEFRUIT PUDDING

Beat 2 eggs well and add 3 tbsps. sugar. Add 3 tbsps. chopped suet, then 2-3 cup flour, ½ tsp. baking powder, ½ tsp. soda and ¼ tsp. salt sifted together. Add 1 cup dry bread crumbs. Meanwhile mix one 11-ounce can of grapefruit and 4 tbsps. sugar and cook down to a thick jam or to about 225 deg. Cool and add to the first mixture. Pour into a greased mold, cover and steam 1½ hours. Serve with fluffy hard sauce, foamy sauce or any desired pudding sauce. Serves eight.

Faithfully Yours,

Martha Lee

Forbes Gets the Story From Dulcy

followed by his wife and daughter, crossing the lawn.

"No more business now," Dulcy called cheerfully. "It's time to play."

Gordon's face was a study in despair. Oh, well, nothing she could say now could matters worse!

"What I like to do, Mr. Forbes, is to cut loose and just be children again," she chattered.

Only from Mrs. Forbes did she get any support, and finally she gave up. Maybe it would be better to wait and spring all her ideas for entertainment after dinner. Mr. Forbes looked so serious. Now was the time to convince him that he was being unfair to Gordon.

She got Gordon to take Mrs. Forbes and Angela to see the garden. Gordon did manage to whisper "no business" warningly before he departed, but Dulcy wore a look of serene contentment.

Gordon in his heart knew that she would lose not a moment.

"I have the most wonderful day planned for you tomorrow," she told Mr. Forbes, enthusiastically. "You're just going to play and play and play."

He tried to protest, but she didn't listen.

"You're going to ride and play golf and—"

"My back," he began feebly. But she wasn't interested in his back. He was just like Gordon, working so hard and never getting diversion in healthy outdoor sports.

Dulcy was willing to stake all on the master stroke she had prepared.

"You know, Gordon works so hard, the poor boy. I don't suppose he had told you, but he's got a lot of things on hand."

Forbes took a renewed interest in the conversation from that moment.

"You might just as well know it isn't only the pearl business he works on," she continued, mysteriously. "He had lots and lots of other interests too."

If Dulcy had thrown a bomb the effect wouldn't have been more startling.

"It's really asking too much of him to make him give up all these other things to come into the jewelry merger with you," she prattled on, innocent of the sensation she was causing. "If he just got 16 2-3 per cent as his share he couldn't afford to give up all his time to it. Oh, no! He'd have to look after his other affairs, too, and you'd be the loser."

"I didn't know he had any other interests," Forbes sputtered indignantly, determined to have this out with the young woman here and now. The infernal cheek of that young man, leading him on to think that he would devote his entire energies to the new combination if Forbes would only take his company over. Obviously Miss Parker knew what she was talking about, she had even mentioned the exact figure which had been discussed only in confidence. We'd caught that chap in his double-dealing now.

He turned to Dulcy to demand a full explanation, but having airily disposed of Gordon's business troubles she was now intent on other plans. Catching a glimpse of Vincent Leach in the window she called breathlessly, "Oh, Gordon, Gordon. Bring Angela here this minute. There's someone waiting for her!"

Monday: Double-Edged Surprise.

Answering Questions of Children

By CONSTANCE CAMERON

"LET'S play," as the children often say, that you are buying a new automobile. You ask the salesman many questions, ending up with: "How often should the oil be changed on this type of car?"

The man laughs, but he's a good-natured soul and laughs a lot, anyway, so you don't attach any significance to it. Oh, forget that. On the 29th of every month this car changes its own oil early in the morning before breakfast."

Assuming that the man knows what he is talking about, you tell this to a group of men friends and they laugh,-they "kid" you unmercifully for having believed him.

It amused me to read in a paper not long ago an account of a father who has answered his child's question as to why a gum tree is called a gum tree, in this manner: "Because gum drops grow on it." Then to make his story "hold water" he planted some gum drops in the boughs of the tree under discussion so when the children shook it next day it, of course, did produce gum drops. The amusing part lay in that Dad is now in a fearful pickle. He is wondering, according to the report, whether to admit that his reply did not have the wisdom of Solomon or begin ordering gum drops by the car load.

A small lad inquired of his mother, "Why does it rain?" and she replied, "Just so I'll have to mop the kitchen oftener when you track mud in."

I don't mean to be a kill joy. Children should be allowed to play jokes, to have laughs with the family at pure nonsense, but when they ask questions in all seriousness and we reply with a glib attempt to be smart, we are not only laying them open to ridicule when they repeat the answer to small companions, but we are laying ourselves wide open to a deep doubt.

Doctor Discusses Births

By LOUIS E. BISCH, M. D., Ph. D.

Dr. L. E. Bisch

AFTER each great war [illegible] What does this [illegible] signify?

Certainly the mothers and fathers in question did not [illegible] to have more children just because thousands of her [illegible] had been killed or maimed.

Surely something deeper and bigger than that has repeatedly brought the phenomenon of post war repopulation about.

Whatever it is, it has been unconscious and it has been mightily compelling. It has made people respond as though they were answering a call of necessity, but without consciously realizing it.

It must be remembered that the reproductive instinct is one of the [illegible] powerful if not the most [illegible]

It has been said that we are born, are nourished until we reach maturity so that we may reproduce our kind, and that then we are quite ready to die.

With us humans it is only true in an analogous sort of way, although there is no gainsaying the fact that it is unnatural not to have children or not to want them.

We need not worry about [illegible] Madness and [illegible]

What we need worry about [illegible] under-population [illegible] by too many persons who are below the average [illegible] in some way.

Unfortunately the most [illegible] families have the smallest number of children.

Yet it is the very stock [illegible] that the world needs. The [illegible] who should reproduce the most reproduce the least.

Children are often a [illegible] to be sure. But our own [illegible] well [illegible] as well as the progress of civilization demands that the reproductive instinct shall not be stifled.

It behooves all intelligent men and women to have as many children as they can possibly afford to bring up properly.

Sandwich Etiquette

By MRS. BEECKMAN

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

A friend and I were discussing table manners the other day and [illegible] under the wrong impression as to certain things, one of them being the correct way to eat a sandwich when [illegible] I have always thought it was permissible to eat a sandwich using both the knife and fork, cutting the sandwich into small sections and eating it with the fork. My friend says this is a breach of etiquette.

Quincy. GERTRUDE.

YOU are absolutely correct in your sandwich eating technic. It is correct to eat a sandwich with both the knife and fork. The most punctilious eaters always do this.

Certainly this manner of eating couldn't be "a breach of etiquette," as your friend maintains. How could it be, since, by eating the sandwich in this way, we would, logically, be using the most careful manners. The use of the knife and fork surely keeps our fingers from becoming even the slightest bit soiled.

PERKINS GOES ON CHEMICAL BOARD

By FRANK H. MELOON
Financial Editor

Thomas Nelson Perkins, acting president of the Boston & Maine Railroad, has just been added to the directorate of Merrimac Chemical Co., Inc., according to announcement made today. Mr. Perkins' directorates cover a wide range of industries. Merrimac stockholders also elected William I. Warren as treasurer to succeed William M. Rand, who continues with the company as vice-president in charge of sales.

Reports are current in the financial district today that control of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co., the world's largest rubber enterprise, had passed into the hands of Cyrus S. Eaton, Cleveland capitalist, and his associates. It is expected that the Eaton group, who have just completed the union of Middle West steel companies, will consolidate a number of Ohio rubber companies with Goodyear as the nucleus.

Prominently mentioned in this proposed combine are the Seiberling Rubber Co. of Akron and the United States Rubber Co., the latter controlled by du Pont interests. All this is in line with our comment of last week on expected big "doings" in the rubber industry.

Recently we pointed out how fortunate Boston was to secure the services as postmaster of an industrial leader like Col. Charles R. Gow, especially considering the comparatively low salary paid by the Federal position. Of course, Col. Gow could not be expected to accept the office other than temporarily.

As president of Warren Bros., big Boston paver, with world-wide contracts, Col. Gow will head a corporation which one year proved the major performer of the New York Stock Exchange. Advisory services for several weeks past have been suggesting the purchase of Warren Bros., world's largest concern of its kind, one predicting it would be a stellar upside performer during the coming months.

Col. Gow's resignation as postmaster recalls his man-sized blow at Civil Service when he was appointed. Col. Gow, it will be recalled, took the "competitive" examination some time after it was announced he would be appointed. When he stated in effect that private corporations would permit no handicap like that of Civil Service, the Federal Board came back with the declaration that a number of private corporations followed the Civil Service plan.

We asked the board for the names of these corporations, knowing they would prove of great news interest in business and financial circles. But when we queried the heads of the names of the half dozen or so corporations sent us by the Civil Service board, we received flat denials from all of them that they followed Civil Service methods or intended to follow them at any future time.

Cities and towns are, in the final analysis, very much like private corporations. They require able management much along the same lines. Unfortunately the "public business" does not, as a rule, attract leaders the same as private industry. The exodus of Colonel Gow is just one more example.

Was former President Coolidge's "Law and Order" slogan, on which he rode triumphantly to the highest position in the land, entirely original? The Old State Street Trader affects to see its derivation in the Amesbury poet's "Barbara Frietchie," quoting the verse:

Over Barbara Frietchie's grave,
Flag of Freedom and Union, wave.
Peace and order and beauty draw
Round thy symbol of light and law.

Because they believe that we can insure the continuance and expansion of such prosperity as we now possess by making transportation as speedy as is consistent with safety, leaders in fields of business and finance are deeply interested in the solving of traffic problems. Amid all the mass of pending legislation nothing appears that looks as if it might be very helpful in this direction.

One evil, however, that 1930 finds partially abolished is the crude custom of haling motorists into court chiefly to afford additional revenues. In a nearby state not so long ago there was an officer sworn in by certain selectmen who made "arrests" on a percentage basis. For a long time his pay averaged above $20 a day. Most cities and towns are awakened today to the realization that motorists should not be interfered with unless their violation of road regulations is actually serious. The influence of Chambers of Commerce and other business bodies is having a good effect.

STOCK MARKET STAGES RALLY NEAR CLOSE

By STANLEY W. PRENOSIL

New York, Feb. 8 (AP)—The stock market turned strong just before the close today when a brisk demand developed for the railroad, public utility, amusement and tobacco shares, many of which were marked up 1 to 8½ points. Early declines of 1 to 3 points in many other issues were cut down or wiped out.

There was nothing in the day's news to explain the sudden reversal in speculative sentiment. Weekly trade reviews were rather cautious in tone, and there were intimations of a slowing up in some of the industries which have been showing sharp recovery since the middle of January, particularly steel.

Weekly market reviews, however, leaned to the opinion that the recent reduction in interest rates would stimulate business, particularly building construction, which has been held up by the high rates for mortgage money.

Union Pacific assumed the leadership of the railroad group by soaring 8½ points. Boston & Maine was marked up 7½, Canadian Pacific 4⅛, Lackawanna 3¼, and Missouri Pacific common. Delaware & Hudson, Chesapeake & Ohio and Louisville & Nashville advanced 2 to 3 points.

Stone & Webster ran up 7 points, Western Union 2½ and Pacific Lighting 2. American Tobacco common ran up 1¼ points and the B stock 3¾, with gains of 2 to 2½ in Reynolds Tobacco B, Porto Rican Tobacco and General Cigar.

Warner Bros. Pictures, in which a new pool recently was organized, was the feature of the amusement group, crossing 60 for the first time this year. Paramount Famous Lasky and Radio Keith-Orpheum also were in brisk demand.

The closing was strong. Total sales approximated 1,600,000 shares.

John D. Ryan Feels Copper Price Will Hold; Gain in Motor Sales

By B. C. FORBES

B. C. Forbes

NEW YORK, Feb. 8—John D. Ryan, America's copper king, feels quite confident that the 18 cents price for copper can be maintained.

Buying is exceeding expectations of automobiles.

General Motors' impending annual report will reveal earnings showing that the shares are now selling substantially below even the old-fashioned yardstick of "ten times earnings."

Steel production continues to expand.

Signs multiply that extremely important Eastern railway consolidations will be effected in the measurably near future.

Average quotations on the New York Stock Exchange have reached a new peak since the panic.

Volume of trading has also gained.

The latest monetary developments, including yesterday's reduction in the New York Federal Reserve Bank's rate to 4 per cent and in the Bank of England's rate to 4½ per cent, are distinct-encouraging.

That leading farm commodities, notably wheat and cotton, have been depressed unduly and are entitled to an upward movement, is coming to be widely recognized.

Postal receipts last month increased almost 2 per cent over January, 1929.

These developments are worth setting up against the unfavorable reports which come from various directions. The situation in this country is decidedly two-sided. Optimists can present a cheerful picture by selecting for portrayal only the rosy phases; pessimists can exhibit a correspondingly gloomy picture by concentrating exculsively on the darker phases of our economic situation.

Emphasis on constructive rather than destructive influences is, however, now in order because, after all, psychology can and does play a real part in the making or unmaking of prosperity.

Assuming that copper producers can maintain the 18 cents per pound price, that industry should enjoy a very profitable year.

We hear much about America's producing over 60 per cent of the world's total copper production, but we hear little about America's copper consumption. Although the companies headed by John D. Ryan are the largest producers of all, the brass and other manufacturing companies controlled by the same interests far outran output, and last year had to buy some 25 per cent additional copper from other producers.

Recently ordering by very large users of copper has set in, after an unusually prolonged spell of holding off. Should the present price stand, the best copper shares would be regarded as unwarrantedly low.

John N. Willys is not alone in now believing that automobile sales this year will greatly exceed calculations made at the end of the year. Instead of 4,000,000, Mr. Willys now regards 5,000,000 as a more accurate estimate. C. O. Miniger, of Electric Auto-Lite, expects sales to exceed 5,000,000 vehicles.

Ford is speeding up production. Chrysler's January shipments were 50 per cent ahead of December. General Motors' executives are greatly encouraged by recent events, especially in the way of economies effected and the amount of gross earnings saved for net.

Here, again, there would seem to be room for improvement in the best shares in the industry, provided the improvement already experienced is maintained. It should be remembered in this connection that many makes of cars, outside of the lowest price range, were advanced in price at the opening of this season.

The recovery already recorded in the stock market is of no little significance. Should our main farm products get back to a basis reasonably satisfactory to growers, our whole economic outlook would be quite encouraging. Commodity price movements during the next few weeks will be watched extremely vigilantly. Should the downward trend unexpectedly continue, the deduction to be drawn would not be cheerful. Although our agricultural population has steadily decreased during recent years, it still constitutes a vitally important percentage of our national purchasing power.

My guess is that the decline in agricultural prices has about run its course.

Also, the indications are that the security markets, both bond and stock, should gradually work, through alternating spurts of strength and reactionary spells, to higher levels.

FAST TROLLEY LINE OF N. H. EARNS MORE

New Haven Railroad's high speed electric railway line, the New York, Westchester & Boston, in 1929 continued the steady growth in earnings which has become so pronounced in the past dozen years. Gross last year crossed $2,500,000 for the first time, increasing $140,000, or 5.8 per cent over 1928, and practically doubling the 1922 gross.

Net earnings after taxes of $684,452 made an even greater gain, amounting to $156,584, or 27.7 per cent. The net earnings were more than seven times the 1922 net of $94,134. In 1920 operating deficit was $87,734, and years prior to that showed deficits.

The Westchester road, one of the costliest bits of interurban electric railway line in the country, built during New Haven's great expansion period and for a time regarded as something of a "white elephant" has, with the rapid development of Westchester county, come to be an important adjunct in the handling of New Haven commuter traffic.

The significance of this growth is that the New Haven may be entirely freed before long of the burden of meeting the interest charges on the New York, Westchester & Boston $22,190,000 first mortgage 4½s, which it guarantees. New Haven owns $2,990,000 par value of the bonds, leaving only $19,200,000 outstanding in the hands of the public.

The Westchester shows no diminution in deficits after total fixed charges, but on the contrary an increase, due to larger accruals to the New Haven. The matter of fixed charges has been an intercompany transaction, the New Haven simply accruing these on its books but not taking them into its own income account. It has made large advances to the Westchester.

The following shows the growth in earnings of the New York, Westchester & Boston during the past 10 years:

	Gross	Net aft. txs. and deprec.	Def. aft. charges

N. E. TELEPHONE REPORT FOUND EXCELLENT

Report of New England Telephone & Telegraph Co., one of the leading subsidiaries of American Telephone & Telegraph Co., is decidedly reassuring to stockholders and to New England generally. Operating revenues for the year totaled [illegible], an increase of approximately [illegible] per cent over the [illegible] figure of 1928, or less than half the 11.6 per cent increase in net income to $11,409,172 from [illegible]. The figures present some indication of the success the management is meeting in getting operations on a more efficient basis.

Gain in profits represents the sixth successive yearly increase. Net profits are approximately 3.2 times the yearly average in the drab 1923-1925 period when the company was battling for its life with rate authorities in the New England territories.

The payment of unearned dividends in those three years nearly wiped out the entire profit and loss surplus of $6,080,716 as of the opening of 1923. Today that account stands at $7,388,125, of which $2,643,716 was earned in 1929. It is noteworthy, also, that profits last year were but 6½ per cent of average book cost of plant, general equipment and working capital, or far below what is held to be a fair return.

That the management has lost no faith in the prospects for New England development is indicated in large capital expenditures. Last year expenditures totaled $23,800,000, the largest on record and comparing with $22,079,000, $21,229,000 and $27,056,761 respectively, in the preceding three years. Next year it is planned to spend $27,000,000.

No more timely support could be asked of Pres. Jones' statement, "We believe it to be prudent to forget 'Decadence of New England' talk, and to be ready with some additional plant to meet the greater demands for service that will be made upon us. The spiritual and material progress of New England is about as regular as the procession of the years."

The following table pictures growth in property and profits in recent years:

COTTON PRICES ARE LIFTED

New York, Feb. 8—Cotton opened irregular today at a decline of 8 points to an advance of 9 points with near months relatively easy under liquidation brought in by the severe decline of yesterday, while later deliveries probably felt the influence of relatively steady Liverpool cables and a firmer technical position.

After the initial offerings had been absorbed old crop positions firmed up with the general list selling about 20 to 25 points net higher on active covering which seemed to be combined with some trade and possibly some investment buying.

May contracts sold up to 15.56 and October to 16.05, but prices were 3 to 4 points off from the best at the end of the first half hour as the hedges appear to be meeting some further liquidation.

Liverpool did not fully meet yesterday's local decline and said liquidation there had been absorbed by trade calling and covering, but that Manchester was depressed with business restricted.

Cotton on shipboard awaiting clearance at the end of the week was estimated at 129,000 bales against 132,000 last year at U. S. ports.

Stores' Earnings Up Over 27 P. C.

New York, Feb. 8—Reliable Stores Corp. and subsidiaries report net sales for the year ended December 31, 1929, of $14,237,783 as compared with $11,187,970 for 1928, an increase of over 27 per cent. Net income before interest and taxes for 1929 amounted to $1,630,286 against $1,218,668 in preceding year, an increase of 35 per cent.

NEW ENGLAND AIR PLANTS ARE BUSY

New York, Feb. 8—Revised estimates of United Aircraft & Transport Corporation 1929 earnings indicate it will show approximately $8,000,000 after all charges and taxes, equivalent to $1.50 a share on 1,792,427 common shares, against $1,841,435 in 1928. Earnings in last quarter were slightly affected by the slump in the industry as a whole. Net for that period was about $1,500,000, against $2,652,791 in preceding quarter when a record was established.

With all plants running at normal production rate and a backlog of some $1,000,000 unfilled orders, however, the bulk of which is from the Government, and with heavy expenditures for new plants behind, outlook for 1930 is bright.

Pratt & Whitney Aircraft Co. continued the outstanding subsidiary in earnings throughout 1929. Expansion of production from 251 Wasp and Hornet engines during 1927 to 953 in 1928 and 2010 in 1929 is indicative of the increasing demand for its product. To keep pace with this demand, foreign and domestic, company recently moved into a new $2,000,000 factory at East Hartford, Ct., which contains about 500,000 square feet of floor space and where facilities are provided for stepping up production to 300 motors monthly, against an average of 200 at present.

Company's new product, the Wasp Junior, recently was approved by the Department of Commerce and soon will be placed in quantity production. It is rated at 300-horsepower. List price is said to be $5000.

Another subsidiary, Chance Vought Corp., maker of Vought Corsair, a pursuit plane, also is about to move into a new factory at East Hartford. It reported 1929 as the best year in its history, having manufactured and sold approximately $3,138,000 worth of planes, a 40 per cent increase over 1928, former record year. It also showed a 400 per cent increase in export business, shipping over $1,000,000 worth of planes against $200,000 in 1928. Chance Vought planes are being used by governments of Argentina, Cuba, China, Mexico and Japan for military purposes.

RAILS LEAD IN BOND MARKET

By JOHN L. COOLEY

New York, Feb. 8 (AP)—Investment rails made progress in today's bond market. The volume of trading was fairly active for a Saturday session.

Atchison general 4s, Baltimore & Ohio refunding 5s, New York Central 3½s and Pennsylvania gold 5s improved fractionally. Southern Railway general 4s, however, sold off a point on the opening transaction.

The new American Telephone 5s asserted their usual leadership in the utility group, trading actively at around 101. Industrials were quiet.

Convertibles, rather dull, moved irregularly although there was a better tone to the rails in sympathy with the movement of stocks in this group.

United States Governments were very firm and several small advances appeared.

ECONOMY HAS A SALES GAIN OF 40 P. C.

Sales of Economy Grocery Stores Corp. for six months ended December 31, 1929, totaled $6,750,767, a gain of $1,912,859 over the same 1928 six months, or approximately 40 per cent. They are greater by 25 per cent than sales of $5,405,666 in the initial six months of 1929, despite the fact that the first half-year usually nets larger sales volume.

Profit margin of the New England chain store organization showed a gain in the latest six months' period despite extraordinary expenses in connection with installing meat markets in 76 of its present locations and in the face of a steady drop in commodity prices, particularly butter, coffee and sugar. In addition, little benefit was derived from approximately $600,000 received in November from offering of 20,000 additional shares at $30 a share. Percentage gain in net earnings for the six months was greater than that in sales. In fact, earnings for the period were substantially in excess of the full year's dividend requirement of $1 a share. The factors point to earnings for the entire fiscal year as setting a new peak, substantially exceeding the previous peak in 1928-29, when net of $271,551 was equivalent to $2.72 a share on 100,000 shares.

Financial status of Economy remains intact, ratio of current assets to current liabilities at the close of the year being 2½ to 1.

B. & O. ADDS TO HOLDINGS

New York, Feb. 8 (AP)—The Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, it was reported in Wall Street today, has increased its holdings in the Reading Company, which in turn controls the Central Railroad of New Jersey, and now owns about 31 per cent of the stock.

The B. & O. formerly had a 25 per cent interest, together with the New York Central, and the reported purchase of additional holdings by the B. & O. is looked upon as an end of the mutual ownership. The B. & O. is known to desire the Reading, and with it the Jersey Central, for a fully-owned entrance to New York.

R. H. Macy & Co. sales for the year ending January 31, 1930, showed a substantial increase over the previous year, Jesse I. Straus, president, says, though complete figures and net profits will not be made public until a complete audit is made.

Mr. Straus said the sales did not quite reach the $100,000,000 mark as was expected in some circles.

Dollar-Hawaiian Merger Proposed

It was reported in financial circles that officials of the Dollar Line and the American-Hawaiian Steamship Co. have held several meetings on various phases of operations, including the possible consolidation of the two companies. It was said, however, that nothing definite had been decided.

Youngstown-Inland Merger Is Possible

Youngstown, O., Feb. 8—Plans by Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co. to build $10,000,000 continuous sheet mill indicate merger with Republic Steel not contemplated in near future. Believed Youngstown may merge with Inland Steel before any merger with Republic.

Cigarette Price Change Unplanned

R. J. Reynolds & Co. does not contemplate increasing the wholesale price of cigarettes, and the recent meeting of officials of manufacturing companies was not to discuss the price situation, an officer of the Reynolds Company said today.

Steel Operations Best in 3 Months

Operations at the plants of the Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co. next week will be increased 5 per cent to 75 per cent of rated capacity, the highest level in three months.

AT THE DIAL

By THE RADIO EDITOR

GRAND OPERA will preempt practically all of WNAC's time during the heart of the evening tonight. The local station will broadcast the Chicago Company's performance of Verdi's "Rigoletto" from the stage and opera pit of the Boston Opera House. This work is the type of opera which lends itself admirably to radio broadcasting. It is light, melodious and swift-moving musically, and the dramatic action is easy to follow.

HALF of the enjoyment of opera is lost when listeners do not know when to look for the show numbers. Frequently a big aria is half completed before newcomers in the audience realize that this is the number which they have heard as a detached bit in a concert hall. The action of the drama tends to take the listener's mind away from the pursuit of melodic gems. He finds himself assimilating the opera as a complete and flowing current of melody until some exquisite phrase or thrilling climax brings sudden realization and stormy applause.

TONIGHT'S opera cast includes Antonio Cortis, tenor, as the Duke; Margherita Salvi, soprano, as Gilda; Richard Bonelli, baritone, as Rigoletto; and Coe Glade, contralto, as Maddelena. Among the ensembles, solos, duets, quartets and choruses of great beauty abounding in the opera, listeners should not overlook the brilliant tenor air in the first act. This is the Duke's aria, "Questa e Quella," in which he describes his own carefree philosophy of life. The second act brings Gilda's familiar "Caro Nome" song, in which she sings of her love for the dear name of her supposed student-lover, "Walter," which, incidentally isn't the Duke's name at all. In the same act is an effective chorus, "Zitti, Zitti," sung in pianissimo by the Duke's men as they are about to abduct Gilda from the house of her father, the jester Rigoletto. In the third act, the scene is dominated by the tragic figure of the bereft Rigoletto, and his great number is "Pari siamo." The fourth act has those two unforgettable numbers, the tenor air, "La Donna e Mobile," and the famous quartet, "Bella Figlia dell' Amore."

THE TENOR AIR in the last act of "Rigoletto" is so catchy in tune that the composer refused to release it to the tenor for the opening performance until the very day of the premiere. He knew that if the tune was heard beforehand, it would be whistled all over Italy before his first night audience could be electrified by it in the course of the performance. For this reason he inserted a supplementary air in the first act and held the big number until the last minute. Its reception went even beyond Verdi's expectations.

THE STAGE of the Opera House will be the scene of still another broadcast tomorrow night on the occasion of the transmission of the Majestic Hour over WNAC and the Columbia System. The Chicago Opera's orchestra, directed by Giorgio Polacco, will be one of the features of the Majestic Hour commencing at 9 p. m. Redferne Hollinshead, tenor, and Muriel La France, soprano, will also be heard. Tickets for admission to the Opera House have been distributed by Majestic dealers of Greater Boston.

SAM CURTIS will make television the subject of his radio chat over WEEI tomorrow afternoon. During his talk he will be visible to owners of television sets, as the broadcast will be picked up from the studios of the Shortwave and Televison Laboratory of Boston. The radio expert will give a description of the workings of the new radio development.

THE ATWATER KENT Hour presents three guest artists, Nina Koshetz, Russian soprano; George Cenanovsky, baritone of the Metropolitan Opera Company, and Eugene Goossens, conductor of the Rochester Philharmonic Orchestra, in the concert to be heard from coast to coast through WEEI and the NBC System, at 9:15 Sunday night.

Goossens will direct the orchestra in four numbers, "March" from "Antar," by Rimsky-Korsakoff; "Valse de Concert No. 2," by Glazounow; Debussy's prelude entitled "The Afternoon of a Faun," and the Overture to "The Flying Dutchman," by Wagner. Josef Pasternack will conduct the orchestra in other numbers of the program. Josef Wohlman, pianist, will be accompanist.

Kip Warns Alice He'll Cut Off Her Alimony

Las Vegas, Nev., Feb. 8 (AP)—Leonard Kip Rhinelander today awaited a reply to the ultimatum issued through his attorney to his former wife, Alice Jones Rhinelander, whom he recently divorced in Nevada.

Rhinelander has served notice that he intends to "stand pat" on his Nevada divorce, and unless Mrs. Rhinelander withdraws her separate maintenance suit now on file in the New York courts, will discontinue the allowance of approximately $200 a month she is receiving from him.

Mrs. Rhinelander has declined to acknowledge the Nevada decree. Several years ago Rhinelander lost an annulment suit in New York when Mrs. Rhinelander succeeded in establishing that he knew before their marriage that she was the daughter of a New Rochelle (N. Y.) negro cabman.

Harley A. Harmon, counsel for Rhinelander, announced he had written to Mrs. Rhinelander's attorneys in New Rochelle, placing Rhinelander's final offer of a money settlement before them and expressing his willingness to confer regarding it, provided the New York litigation is discontinued.

Regarding this, Judge William B. Cunningham, counsel for Mrs. Rhinelander in New Rochelle, said: "Very interesting, but no figures are mentioned."

SCORES RADIO, POWER TRUSTS

Washington, Feb. 8 (AP)—The assertion that the Federal Radio Commission had given "the radio trust and the power trust" more than half of the exclusive broadcasting channels available in the United States, was made today by Senator Wheeler, Democrat, Montana, at a hearing by the Senate interstate commerce committee on the Couzens bill.

Senator Wheeler made the charge while questioning Commissioner Sykes. The Montanan asserted he wanted the facts "in order that the country may get a clear picture of just what is happening in radio."

"The power trust and the radio trust, which are the same thing," said Wheeler, "have exclusive right to 27 of 40 channels."

MAYOR WALKER OPENS N. Y. AIR SHOW

By GEORGE HAMBLIN

New York, Feb. 8—The second annual New York Aviation Show, under the auspices of Aviators Post 743, American Legion, was officially opened at the Grand Central Palace by Mayor Walker, while several thousand spectators crowded the three floors of the building.

Immediately after the opening Mayor Walker introduced Commander Rex Gilmartin, who is the guiding genius of the show. Members of the Curtiss commemorative flight were also present, having made the trip from Albany in slightly less than an hour, whereas Glenn Curtiss took nearly three hours 20 years ago. After the official business was concluded, the whole three floors were thrown open to the public.

The show is one of the finest of the lot.

Not one of the largest, because the extravaganzas at Detroit and St. Louis will be on a much larger scale, but it is impossible to have a more complete layout.

ALL TYPES OF PLANES

There are 39 airplanes and gliders on show, for the inspection of the visiting public, ranging from the tiny, single place, motorless gliders of the American Motorless Aviation Corp., to the newest and largest all metal cabin monoplane ever built in this country, the Uppercu Burnelli. The latter is one of the "trickiest" pieces of modern aircraft engineering we have ever seen.

For those who like their airplanes old and with histories, up on the third floor of the building are two war-time ships, both used in the production of a current film.

One of the ships is a British SE-5, powered with a 220 Hisso, and the other is a German Fokker. Both ships in equal state of disrepair, present a striking contrast to the trim, clean and efficient airplanes built today.

HUB REPRESENTED

Accessories come in for their part of the show, with booth after booth displaying everything from a pair of goggles to a complete flying outfit, motors, paints, and so forth.

Socially, the show is the gathering place of the boys, not only those now engaged in commercial flying in New England, but also for those who have come to New York from New England to take jobs with the big outfits down here.

First on the list, perhaps, is none other than Dan Rochford, for years aviation editor of the Boston Transcript, and who is now doing the advertising and publicity work for Pan-American airways.

Then there was the Colonial Air Transport contingent, composed of Ben Pollett, general traffic manager; Sumner Sewell, assistant general traffic manager for the Aviation Corp., owners of the Boston-New York air line. And many others around.

Fred Pereira, who works in Bay State flying service at Boston airport, was on deck with his usual genial smile, taking in the whole show and looking for a light student instruction airplane, for use in his flying school this summer.

Dave Sher, Ike Dawson and Hank Olden, general manager, president and chief pilot, respectively, of Sound Airways of New Bedford, were also present.

Dave took us to one side and whispered that his wife Mary, and his sister, Beverly, had both been signed on the student roster for this coming summer. They will be the first two women to start instruction with the New Bedford outfit.

Ed Warner, editor of "aviation," and former head of the aeronautical department of M. I. T.; Everett P. Gordon, war-time flyer, and countless others of the boys were present for the opening ceremonies.

Tomorrow, in the Boston Sunday Advertiser, we will report our impressions of the second day of the show.
